Poultry producers step out 1700 strong

BY SHEILA MILLER

LANCASTER — For seven straight years, the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation hosted a record crowd at its annual fund raising banquet, and this year is no exception. Over 1700 poultry producers and industry people turned out for Banquet Number 8, exceeding the attendance of previous years, according to John Hoffman, the Federation's executive director.

"When we started the fund raising event, we had 300 people gather at the Penn Harris Hotel in Harrisburg," Hoffman remembered. "We've been coming to the Host Farm in Lancaster for the past five years, and always seem to fill more rooms than before."

Hoffman explained the funds raised at the banquet are the source of income for the state association. It provides an organized voice for the poultry industry and protects producers' interests. Money goes to research, disease control, scholarships, and youth activities.

Co-chairing this year's successful program were Bob Graybill, of Pennfield Corporation; Jay Greider, of Greider Farms, Inc.; and Dale M. Weaver, of Victor F. Weaver, Inc.

On hand for the festivities were special industrymen, recognized previously for their contributions to the poultry business.

Lancaster County's Vernon Leininger, R2 Denver, is the Egg Industryman of the Year. He has 90,000 layers at his Ko-Ka-Le-Ko Egg Ranch. He has been honored in the Federation's Gold Feather Club, which recognizes exceptional sales people.

Leininger has been raising chickens for the past 20 years. Assisting him with the farm, which also produces steers, hogs, grain, and alfalfa, are sons David and Michael.

The Broiler Industryman of the Year is Earl Gingrich, of Hummelstown. Gingrich was employed by Pennfield Corporation for 20 years in the broiler division. He explained he worked with breeder chickens, producing the company's own hatching eggs for broiler chicks.

Now retired, Gingrich lives on a 60 acre farm where he grows

FmHA denies Eastern's $20 million loan request

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

SYRACUSE,N.Y. — The application of Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative Association for a $20 million loan guarantee has been denied by the Farmers Home Administration.

John D. Robertson, acting New York State Director for FmHA, said the notification of denial was received from the national offices in Washington, D.C. on March 23.

Notification was given to Eastern by the state office on April 9

Robertson said the denial from the national office was based on various credit factors

The acting state director explained that four main reasons were given in the denial. These include:

–Lack of equity position by Eastern –Operating losses.

–Lack of personal or corporate guarantees

–And concern that Eastern would not be able to meet its milk supply contract with Leprino Foods, which is supposed to be the source of funds to repay the loan

Michael Donovan, General Manager of Eastern, in a prepared news release from Eastern, questioned the accuracy of FmHA's analysis of the application, saying that its equity position has improved steadily during the two and one-half years it has taken for a decision to be made on the loan application.

Donovan further claimed that

Grieco named House Ag Chairman

BY CURT HARLER

HARRISBURG — Joseph V. Grieco, representative from Lycoming and Northumberland Counties, this week was named the new House Agriculture Committee Chairman.

Grieco replaces Roy W. Wilt, the Greenville legislator who stepped down as House Ag Committee Chairman. Wilt won a special election in late March for a state senate seat.

Grieco said Thursday he decided to accept the position after "a heart-to-heart talk" with House Majority Leader Matthew J. Ryan.

The new Ag Chairman is a fifth-term Republican from Jersey Shore. He has been a member of the House Agriculture Committee during all nine of the years he has served the 84th District.

Although not a farm boy, Grieco has close ties to farming. He worked with his father and brothers in the wholesale fruit and vegetable business.

The family purchased strawberries, cabbage, lettuce, onions and other produce and had daily contact with farmers, Grieco said.

In addition, Grieco has a long-term background in ag legislation. He was one of three senior house memebers considered to be on the inside track for the position vacated by Wilt.

Grieco told Lancaster Farming his first priority as Ag Chairman will be to preserve farmland for future years.

He said his next priority will be to modify current inheritance tax laws to be certain they are written

Sheila Miller to edit 'Farming'

LITITZ — Sheila M. Miller has been appointed editor of Lancaster Farming, announces Robert G. Campbell, publisher.

Miller, who has served as associate editor on the staff for the past year and a half, is replacing E Curtis Harler who submitted his resignation April 6

Miller is a 1974 graduate of Penn State's College of Agriculture, where she majored in General Agriculture. After graduation, she was employed by the USDA Soil Conservation Service for five years, working in Adams, Berks, and Lackawanna counties.

While a student at Penn State, Miller was active in the Block and Bridle Club and served as corresponding secretary. She is a member of the Phi Kappa Phi and Gamma Sigma Delta honor societies. She was a member of the 1973 Meats Judging Team.

Miller is the daughter of Vernon and Mildred Miller of R1 Hershey, and is married to Michael L. Miller, the son of Charles and Kathaleen Miller, R5 Gettysburg.

Farming has been an important part of Miller's life, having grown up on her parents' farm where she learned the basics of raising beef cattle and crops. These childhood lessons and the skills learned at Penn State and with USDA are being applied on the farm recently purchased by Sheila and her husband, where they raise purebred Polled Hereford cattle and Irish Setters.

Sheila Miller

One of her favorite hobbies is horseback riding and driving, and her horses have traveled with her on every move since college. One of her hayburners, Charlie, is a Quarter Horse she's shared with her older sister, Verna Miller Case, (now a college professor in Davidson, North Carolina) since Miller was eleven years old. Stable mates to the aging gelding are a Morgan-Arabian gelding and a Standardbred mare.

By accepting the editor's position, Miller has become the first woman to assume these duties in the history of Lancaster Farming.

Lancaster Farming says...

No exceptions to the rules

There are a fistful of measures floating around Washington, D.C these days, all proposing to become the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981

The Reagan Administration has its version and several senators and representatives are working on their own bills, or at least amendments to the Administration's program.

The legislative drafting session on the farm bill is scheduled to begin in the Senate on Monday, April 27. Sources on the Hill say they want to have a farm bill to report out of the Ag Committee by the middle of May.

Farmers, and their lobbying organizations, being basically conservative, can be expected to go along with the broad brush of the Administration's ideas It's in the specifics that the sparks are flying

There are three strong areas of resistance the southern agricultural lobby will raise the roof about peanut supports; grain farmers will be displeased with the loan programs; and dairy producers are gathering forces to increase the minimum of 70 percent of parity set for dairy prices

The only reason Reagan's economists won't hear from cattle or hog producers is because there is no set cattle or hog program.

Farm policy is similar to so much in the total Reagan economic package — the economic pains in the farm program will be accepted by farmers as long as they hurt somebody else

Like welfare recipients, like labor unions, like big business, each farm lobby has reasons why its pet programs should stay while all others get the axe

The National Peanut Growers say their support price is 30 percent under cost of production They moan that the government has given them only an 8.3 percent support increase on peanuts since 1977 to cope with an increase in production costs of over 40 percent in the same period

Corn loan rates may go to $2.40 a bushel for the 1981 crop. But, cash grain operators note, the higher loan rate will have little impact on corn in reserve as the call level already has been reached.

For 1981 target prices, USDA still isn't sure whether to stick with the 1980 rate or go along with increases proposed under the previous Administration. Reagan opposes the target price concept, partly because the government may end up paying lots of cash in deficiency payments

Dairy producers, hardly satisfied with USDA's denying the CNI milk petition without even giving the consumer group a hearing, are off on another crusade

They want to see the minimum support level on dairy prices increased from the Administration-proposed 70 percent to 75 percent Dairy producers may have to settle for a version of the recently defeated measure to limit casein imports.

Each case — from peanut supports to post office grants, from patrons of the arts to parity for dairy producers — is worthy of support

But each represents a special interest. Near and dear to the hearts of its small constituency, each adds a few more flames of funding to the fires which fuel inflation

One of the keystones of our nation is that we sink or swim together, as a union.

In the current program to whip inflation, there is no room for a privileged few to thrive while other farmers tighten belts To be fair, it should be all or none

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHEN THEY SAW HIM
April 26, 1981

Background Scripture:
Matthew 17:1-9; 28:11-20.
Devotional Reading:
1 Peter 1:13-25.

The Easter story does not end with "And they all lived happily forever." It is not just a "happy ending" story but an open-ended story. The last words that the resurrection Christ speaks to his disciples, according to Matthew, begin with a "therefore." The resurrection is not an event that is now over, but something that is to continue. "Go therefore," says the Risen Christ, "and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that I have commanded you."

But Some Doubted

Matthew's account of the Resurrection of Christ helps us to realize that the experience of the resurrected Lord was not an irresistable one. Heeding the instructions of the two Marys fresh from the tomb, the disciples went to Galilee as the angel instructed them and there, on a mountain familiar to them (probably the Mount of Transfiguration), they encountered the Risen Lord. "And when they saw him," Matthew tells us, "they worshipped him; but some doubted."

Although they all had pretty much the same experience, some believed it was the Risen Lord and some did not. Whatever they saw or heard or felt, it did not evoke the same response in them. God may do his best to persuade us, but he does not compel us to believe. He gives us evidence for commitment, but not proof, for proof is something that comes only from within us. The final "proof" is nothing more than faith.

I'm glad that Matthew tells us that "some doubted", for that helps me in dealing with the resurrection. Whatever it is, I know that it will require more from me than sheer acceptance of accumulated facts. I will go as far as I can with my logical, questioning mind, but then I will come to a place in the road where I cannot step across and won't turn back. It is then I must make a leap of faith.

Go, Therefore...

The resurrection gave birth to a commission to "make disciples of all nations." But lots of Christians never get beyond the Easter celebration. They go home on Easter Sunday with a comfortable feeling in their hearts: "Christ is risen! God overcomes the sins of the world! What they miss is the challenge to "Go therefore and make disciples..."

Why is it that Christians today are so low key about the Good News of the Risen Christ I used to think that it was probably indifference, preoccupation, cowardice, or laziness. But I have come to wonder whether the reason is that we ourselves have not experienced him Our Easter experience is not a direct experience, but something handed down from someone else. We are not proclaiming him, because we don't really know him.

And if we don't know him, it's not because he does not come to us, but that we have not climbed some inner mountain to find him. For if we seek him, we will know the Easter experience. And when we have known the Easter experience, we will fulfill our Easter Commission.

NOW IS THE TIME

To be careful with fertilizer placement

Most of the crops we plant will require additional plant food in the form of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash to obtain maximum yields. However, we must realize the potential danger of burning seeds or roots when they come in direct contact with either the nitrogen or potash fertilizer. Either of these elements will stunt or prevent germination

Fertilizer should be placed to the side or deeper than the plant roots or seed. Most mechanical planters are now designed to keep the seeds and fertilizer at least two inches apart. In the case of plants, the fertilizer should be either worked into the topsoil in advance of planting or side-dressed along the row after the plants have been transplanted. Proper fertilizer placement will return greater benefits from the plant food.

To manage poultry house equipment

General management of poultry house equipment is important in maintaining a comfortable environment for chickens and turkeys. Defective equipment should be repaired or replaced promptly, especially if it is involved with the delivery of feed or water to the birds.

Rusty cages will allow some birds to escape and may trap or injure other birds. All sharp edges in the poultry house must be removed to avoid injuries. Rusty and decaying feed bins allow moisture to get to the feed, resulting in mold growth and sick birds.

Respect soils and weather

Nice spring-like conditions beckon us to the out-of-doors and into our gardens and fields, to till the soil and to seed our crops and vegetables. Many of us enjoy getting our crops and vegetables in early to enjoy that early harvest and to get the plants well established prior to the onset of dry weather. However, Glenn Shirk, reminds us that seeds need warm, moist, fertile soils for rapid germination. Our aim ought to be for seeds to germinate rapidly, before they are damaged by insects and disease organisms in the soil, and for the young seedling to emerge before a hard crust forms on the soil surface. Study long range forecasts carefully, and plant at the beginning of a prolonged warm spell. Stay off soils when they are wet. To increase the tilth and absorbancy of the soil, incorporate organic materials such as manures, compost, cover crops, etc. Starter fertilizers, high in phosphorus, used sparingly and placed in close proximity to the seed, but not in contact with it, will aid germination and emergence, especially if soils are cool and of low fertility. If soils are dry at planting time, it will also help to press the soil into close contact with the seed. Don't seed too deep, a good rule of thumb is seed to a depth that is about four times the diameter of the seed.

To think of neighbors when spreading manure

Livestock farmers who work with animals everyday may not be

HAY HAWS

Don't look now, Mike, but I think we may have a problem. Some of the seed corn bags got mixed up and I think you just planted about 10 acres of feed pellets.

But in addition to big yields, AP-250 gives you good emergence, tolerance to tested races of Phytophthora root rot and good resistance to lodging

NEW AGRIPRO™ AP-350

Tests prove it outyields Williams and Mitchell.

AP 350 is a welcome addition to Group IV maturity It combines overall yield performance superiority with an excellent chlorosis rating plus resistance to race I Phytophthora root rot and tolerance to other tested races Plus good emergence too Look at the yield data on this bean For its maturity, it would be difficult to find a better bean

BIG BONUS BEANS

- Early Group III pureline variety with top yield potential
- Good emergence Excellent standability
- Resistance to Race 1, extreme tolerance to Race 3 Phytophthora

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

It was with shock, dismay, and disbelief which I learned of the plans of the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine for the "transfer of responsibilities of Pennsylvania Embryo Transfer Service (PETS) to a new and larger group" and to "make all of its embryo transfer facilities and clinical and specialty areas available for their use."

As a member of the embryo transfer community I could not comprehend what had inspired this chain of events. Dr. James Evans has headed a fine and dedicated staff since the inception of this endeavor at the University, and they have built the transfer unit to what it is today.

Yet, since he has submitted his resignation, neither he, nor any of his staff, nor any of the other embryo transfer associations have been informed or even consulted as to the course the University is going to take.

We are the people the University is supposed to be working with. We were good enough to work with the University the last two years when they needed livestock or the loan of equipment. But apparently we were not important enough to be consulted when it came to this very important decision. What the answers are, we do not know. We have been kept in the dark. But a lot of PETS clients are asking questions.

A few of the ones we would like answered:

1. Why were other embryo transfer services not even consulted as to the plans of the University with the stepping aside of Dr. Evans.

2. Why was one company of the industry unilaterally and arbitrarily chosen for full access to the University's clients, embryo transfer facilities, and "many clinical and specialty areas at the School of Veterinary Medicine," a school which is largely state funded by taxpayer money.

3. The question must also arise how an institution, granted tax free status and provided with public funds, can provide and promote a commercial enterprise within the shelter of its not-for-profit status in direct and unfair competition with private tax paying enterprises.

4. Was the merging of two of the largest embryo transfer units in the Eastern United States into one operation an attempt at gaining a monopoly on the embryo transfer business in the east, and who would be gaining by this misuse of public funds. (Remember, the business was built and facilities provided by taxpayer expenditures over a five year period. Now, somebody in the University has decided that one company should benefit from this vast expenditure and not the entire industry.)

This is not sour grapes. It is true that we, too, are in the embryo transfer business, but these are all questions asked by PETS clients, and Holstein breeders everywhere whose state association also unfortunately now, has a large investment in support of the University program.

We do have a lot to lose. Up until now the different embryo transfer services have competed with a spirit of cooperation, a trait which can only add dignity to the profession.

The University threatens to undermine what they should be promoting, by failing to consult with the present staff or with anybody else in the associated field. As a University influence they are adding creditability, deserving or not, to those which they endorse, and detracting it from those which they do not endorse.

When one cannot find out what is going on, one must wonder what one is trying to hide.

We believe the present staff of PETS, the remainder of the embryo transfer enterprise, and the taxpayers of Pennsylvania deserve better answers!

Dear editor:

I would like to comment on your recent editorial, "All Together Under One Roof."

If people think that the trend to confinement livestock, poultry, and marine production is a "kick" and a "fad", then consider this. farm land in Lancaster County commands a price of $3000 to $5000 per acre. Not because the land is that productive from a strict agriculture sense, but because real estate developers are willing to pay that amount of money to forever cover the land with parking lots, shopping centers, apartment houses and tract homes

As our agricultural acreage disappears at the rate of two to three million acres annually, where are the farmers going to produce the meat, eggs, milk, and butter?

Confinement systems, which offer efficient production of animal products and require very little land, and which can utilize non-tillable acreage, are the only sensible and available answers if we are to continue producing high quality food for Americans at a reasonable price.

as keenly aware of manure odors as their non-farm neighbors. I know that everyone's time is at a premium at this season of year, but I would like to suggest that you should try to spread manure only when conditions are right to minimize odor problems. Wait for a day with low relative humidity, clear sunny skies, and spread the manure on land that is dry enough to plow or disk. The best time of day is between 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. when suburban people are at work. Also, try to avoid spreading on weekends and holidays when neighbors are likely to be engaged in nearby outdoor activities. Whenever possible, the manure should be plowed or disked into the soil as soon as possible after spreading. This not only minimizes odors but also preserves nutrients and reduces the potential for surface runoff that causes water pollution.

Eastern

Eastern's equity position has improved enough to make alternate sources of financing available even without an FmHA guarantee.

But, when contacted, Eastern officials declined to identify these alternate sources of financing.

Commenting on Eastern's claim of now being able to obtain alternate sources of financing, Acting State FmHA Director Robertson said

"We're not aware of any such sources and it comes as a surprise to us."

The application for the loan guarantee deals with financing for a joint venture between Eastern and Leprino Foods, of Denver, Col.

The joint venture included Eastern's proposed purchase of two mozzarella cheese manufacturing plants in Horseheads, N.Y and South Waverly, Pa. These facilities would then be leased to Leprino for 20 years for processing, packaging and distribution of the end product.

Eastern said that it was told by the FmHA that the proposed project does not comply with requirements that loans provide lasting community benefits.

Donovan pointed to another factor he says illustrates the value of the joint venture. He referred to the picking up of those dairy farmers in the area of the Horseheads and Waverly plants who had been dropped about a month ago by Pollio Dairies

Donovan ended the news release statement by an expression of confidence that financing will be found and Eastern ownership of the cheese plant facilities will be insured

wheel systems

The advantages of using DMI's multiple wheels are well known throughout the farm industry DMI 10 Bolt Axle Mount Duals have an unlimited horsepower rating because of the pressed fit between axle and hub which provides the holding power to eliminate hub-rocking The Sup r-lok II Duals feature a non-slip band that wedges into the second bead of the tractor wheel rim when all the bolts are secured some will angle to the left and some to the right to provide triangular bracing against forward and reverse thrust You can purchase either type for dualing then when you are ready to triple all you need to do is buy the opposite type 10-Bolt Axle Mount set must be mounted as duals and Sup r-lok II set as triples (as shown in the cutaway) to achieve the greatest possible strength Can you afford not to keep on the-go with DMI? Game Commission proposes season changes

HARRISBURG — A closed season on bobwhite quail, new turkey management units and increased allocations of antlerless deer licenses highlight the Game Commission's proposals for 1981-82 hunting and trapping seasons and bag limits

A previously-advanced proposal which would have required drawings to be held for all antlerless deer licenses has been eliminated.

Under season proposals, the archery deer season would begin on October 3 and end on October 30. The early small game season would open on October 17, and the regular small game season would start on October 31. The fall small game seasons would end on November 28.

A one-day bear season has been proposed for November 23. The regular two-week antlered deer season would open November 30 and end on December 12, while a two-day antlerless deer season has been proposed for December 14 and 15.

The late archery and flintlock deer season is proposed to open December 26 and close on January 2, while the winter small game season would open December 26 and close on January 9.

Proposed trapping seasons and bag limits are pretty much in line with those of recent years.

The closing of the quail season, if adopted, would be the first since 1953. Southern Pennsylvania is the northern fringe of the quail's natural range, and recent hard winters and farming practices have reduced the bobwhite population in the Keystone State to a level that a hunting harvest is not warranted this year.

Closure of the quail season may allow the bird to increase in numbers where habitat is adequate. This could allow the launching of a trap and transfer program to establish additional populations.

In addition, closure of the quail hunting season would provide additional protection for recently stocked Hungarian partridges.

Formation of three new turkey management units will provide the Game Commission with an opportunity to better control harvests of the state's largest game bird.

Included in the primary turkey management unit will be most of northcentral Pennsylvania where turkey hunters have traditionally enjoyed longer seasons.

The second turkey unit will be roughly Y-shaped, including southcentral Pennsylvania, the northeastern part of the state and a fair-sized section of west-central Pennsylvania. The final turkey area will consist of two parts: the southeastern and western parts of the state.

In the northcentral area, the proposed fall turkey season would open on October 31 and close on November 21. In the other two turkey management areas, the proposed season would open on October 31 and close on November 14

The Game Commission plans to reserve the right to extend the turkey season in any section or sections if summer brood counts indicate sufficient numbers of birds to permit longer seasons.

To protect wild turkey populations which have been trapped and transferred recently, and to study the effects of hunting presures, the Game Commission is proposing that most of Erie County and that part of Mercer County west of Interstate Route 79 be closed to fall turkey hunting, while all of Crawford County will be open to turkey hunters this fall.

The Game Commission this year is proposing that the bear hunting season be restricted to 32 counties Unless a bear hunting license is created by legislation prior to June 1, the number of persons hunting bears in Pennsylvania in 1981 will be unrestricted.

Increased productivity and survival, praticularly in central and southeastern Pennsylvania, have led to the proposed allocation of 451,250 antlerless deer licenses for 1981. In 1980, the Game Commission authorized the allocation of 410,600 antlerless licenses.

Several changes are being proposed in deer seasons in southeastern and southwest Pennsylvania.

In the Special Regulations Area in the southeast, and in Allegheny County in the southwest, an any-deer season (for those who hold antlerless deer licenses) is being proposed from November 30 through December 15.

For those who do not have antlerless deer licenses, only antlered deer could be taken in the two special regulations areas in the southeast and the southwest. An antlerless deer license is valid only in the county in which it is issued.

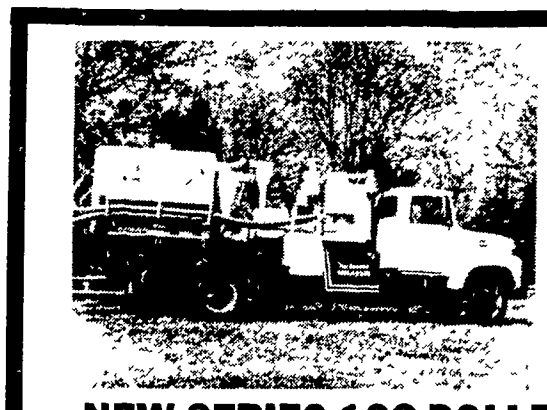
The six-day antlerless deer area in southeastern Pennsylvania will be eliminated this year.

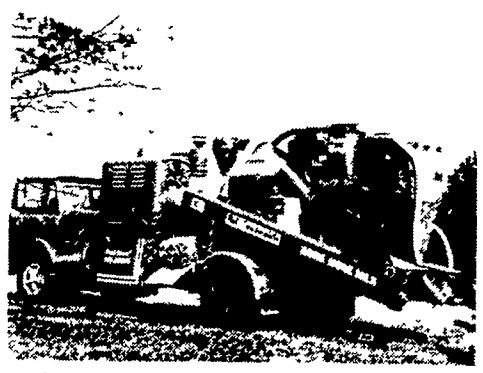
The proposal previously put forth by the Game Commission that would have required drawings to be held to select recipients of antlerless deer licenses was set aside after it was determined for proposal could have seriously jeopardized the state's deer management program.

It is the feeling now that it would be in the best interest of the deer resource to continue to permit county treasurers to either hold drawings or to issue the licenses on a first-come-first-served basis. Field officers will be directed to closely monitor antlerless license distribution in each county so the process is in accordance with Game Commission rules and regulations.

An attempt will also be made to develop a system whereby certain landowners who keep their lands open to antlerless deer hunting will be assured of receiving antlerless deer licenses, hopefully by 1982.

The Game Commission this year is also proposing that a November 4 - January 21 hunting season be established on most furbearers to provide better management of these important wildlife resources.





NEW SERIES 102 ROLLFEEDMOBILE ANNOUNCED

Greater productive capacity coupled with greatly increased operating efficiency and decreased fuel consumption are incorporated in the 1981 version of the well-known mobile feed processing machine, the Series 102 FEEDMOBILE.

This mobile feed mill that processes animal and poultry feeds on the farm where they are used from farm produced grains and roughages has been completely re-engineered to reduce weight by more than 20% to reduce operating fuel consumption by more than 33% At the same time productive capacity and speed has been increased A completely re-designed drive train has fewer bearings, chain and belt drives and gear boxes with the result that friction has been materially reduced to lower power demand

Productive capacity has been increased to 1,000 pounds per minute by enlarging the mouth of the patented underfed hammermill The hammermill will handle whole bales or roughage at lower rpm's

The 102 cubic foot capacity mixer includes micro control for more accurate proportioning of feed ingredients. A new feature that further improved ingredients proportioning is an optional, automatic scale

The new design also facilitates maintenance by reducing the number of belt and chain adjustments and replacements needed to keep the 1981 FEEDMOBILE in continuous, productive operation.

The 1981, Series 102 FEEDMOBILE is available equipped with the new hammermill, with an improved, high-pressure roller or a combination of these two systems for processing farm grown materials to make highly productive animal and poultry feeds with much lower fossil fuel consumption, less labor and at lower operating costs

This pig reached 221 lbs. in just 150 days on the Agway swine feeding program. And that's not unusual.

It's no secret that feed is the single biggest cost in producing pork. That's why it pays to make sure your feeding program gets your pigs to market weight in the shortest possible time.

From Agway Squealer Pellets to Agway Pork Finisher, there's a farm-tested Agway feed nutritionally formulated for each stage of a pig's growth. Agway complete swine feeds provide all known nutritional needs, including energy, protein (amino acids), minerals and vitamins.

The farm tested Agway swine feed program can help make each of your pigs an ideal pig

BACKED BY FEED TRIALS ON 1800 PIGS ANNUALLY.

Agway, in conjunction with other cooperatives, runs feed trials on 1800 pigs annually at the Agway Swine Research Farm in Lexington, Ill.

New feed ideas are constantly tested and proven, and the results incorporated into the Agway swine feeding program.

The ideal hog as defined by the American Pork Congress attains a weight of 220 lbs in 150 to 165 days It requires no more than 3 lbs of feed per each pound of gain and delivers a loin 30 inches long with a loin eye of 5 square inches

In the past, Agway Squealer Pellets and Agway Starter Pellets were developed as the direct result of this program.

Weed control tips for vegetable growers

GEORGETOWN, Del. — As vegetable producers get ready for the growing season, one of their first concerns is weed control. When you're ready to treat, it's important to use only those herbicides labeled for the particular crop you're growing, cautions University of Delaware extension vegetable specialist Mike Orzolek.

When you use a chemical not labeled for a crop, not only do you violate EPA regulations, you also run the risk of crop injury, he says It's just as important to apply materials at the labeled rate. If you go above this, you may get carry-over that affects the following crop in that field.

Remember that herbicides control only specific weeds, so check labels carefully and relate what you use to the weed problems in each field

For instance, Jimsonweed may need controlling in one field, but not in others. It helps to have a good idea of the weed species in each field ahead of time.

Orzolek suggests scouting the land the previous fall and noting what your problems are In one field the problem may be chickweed or henbit; in another, crabgrass or witchgrass.

Map out the heavy infestations If you can't find a suitable herbicide for a particular vegetable crop such as spinach you can always switch to a different one—perhaps sweet corn, or field corn if you're into that kind of rotation.

There are several tank mixes with atrazine which will give you good control of most annual grasses as well as the more common broadleaf weeds. Some of the more persistent broadleafs such as horsenettle which have a rhizome root system may require cultivation in addition to an herbicide for effective control.

In some cases you may need to let such stubborn weeds grow through the season, depending on the vegetable crop. Tolerate them until after harvest Then go in and spot spray with Roundup. Wait two weeks to give this time to take effect before coming in with your disk or plow.

Growers were hoping to have a promising new material – Sonalan – available for use on cucurbit crops in Delaware this summer, but clearance didn't come through in time for the manufacturer to produce, package and distribute the chemical for 1981

It should be available for the 1982 growing season, however, and looks good for week control on cucurbits like watermelons, cantalopes and cucumbers, as well as beans and peas, Orzolek says

In the meantime, there are several standard herbicides you can use on cucurbits this year Just be sure to check the label to be sure the material you use is safe for the crop you're growing.

The specialist suggests you go by recommendations in the current Delaware Commercial Vegetable guide. Copies of this extension publication are available at county extension offices in Newark (302-738-2506), Dover (302-736-4675), and Georgetown (302-856-5250).

If you're using a pre-plant incorported herbicide, take care not to incorporate it any deeper than recommended. Some materials shouldn't be worked in any deeper than two inches.

If you disk them in to four or five inches, you'll either dilute them or place the herbicide below weed seeds where it can't be effective as a seed inhibitor. In either case, you won't get the control you're after.

Pre-emergence herbicides generally rquire water to be effective. So if you think it's going to be a dry season, be sure you provide for irrigation if you plan to use one of these materials.

Otherwise, be prepared for poor weed control, or none at all. Though moisture is less critical for them, even pre-plant incorporated materials work better if there's rain within two weeks after application.

Some new post-emergence chemicals have been cleared for use on vegetables this year. Just remember that these products are specific for either grass or broadleaf weeds – not both.

Some weed killers must be applied at the proper growth stage of the weeds to be effective–another good reason to read labels before treating. For example, to control ragweed, Basagran must be applied when weed plants are two to three inches tall. So take care not to let weeds get beyond the controllable size.

Successful weed control also depends on proper application. Check your spray equipment over well before using it. Pumps and agitators should be working properly. Make sure spray tips aren't worn. Take care to replace screens frequently to prevent blockage.

And make sure your boom is level. If one side is higher than the other, you could get some overlap. This could result in chemical burn to your crop, or carry-over in the soil that damages the next crop.

Speaking of carry-over, there are certain herbicides which are very persistent. One used on vegetables is Devrinal. There's no reason to be afraid to use such materials, but you must be aware that after your crop is finished you won't be able to plant certain cover crops such as barley, wheat or rye unless you go in first and moldboard plow.

Disking won't turn the soil enough to dilute the chemical.

Check the label and find out what crops may be affected. Either avoid them or moldboard plow.

Chester County Conservation Field Day moves soil to save it

UNIONVILLE — After thirty-three years, the Chester County Conservation District and the Brandywine Valley Association hosted another conservation field day.

The field day was held on Tuesday and Wednesday at the H.E. Myrick Conservation Center, the scene of earthmoving and water control during the 48 hour conservation effort.

The conservation center was recently given to the Brandywine Valley Association by H.E. Myrick, who retained a life estate on his 212 acre property. After the death of the former Bell Telephone engineer last fall, BVA proceded with plans to develop the neglected farm into a conservation center.

Out of the total farm, 75 acres have been set aside to serve as a model farm, with conservation practices installed to demonstrate their effectiveness on surface water and erosion control. The remainder of the property is planned for a nature education center.

Robert Hicks, a Chester County farmer from Kennett Square, will be farming the 58 acres of cropland. He demonstrated no-till corn planting to the farmers and visitors at the field day.

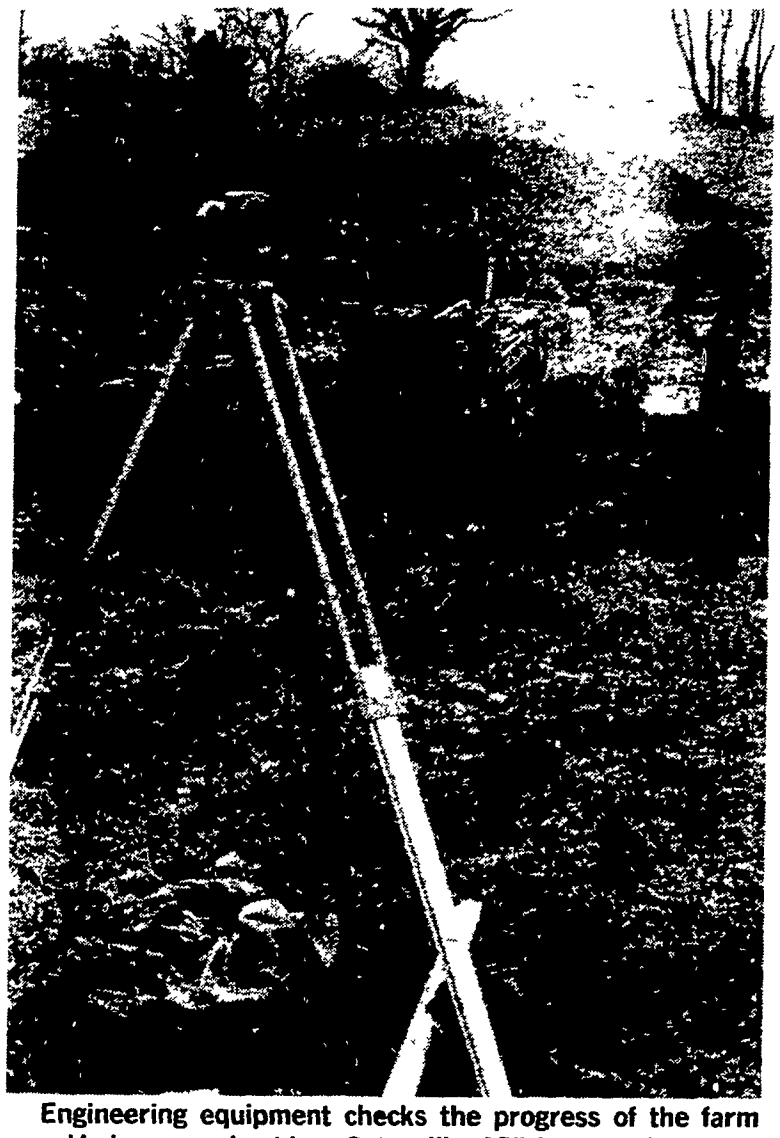
A conseravation field day had been held once before in Chester County — the year was 1948. The farm where the conservation work was applied then is now a housing development and elementary school site.

Over the two day period, contractors donated their time and machinery to install gradient and storage terraces and diversions, remove fence rows, install tile drainage, construct a pond and develop a livestock watering facility. Contour strips were also staked and plowed in by the farmer.

Contributing to the success of this conservation effort were: Brubaker Excavating Company, Narvon; Earnest Carter, Kennett Square; Cocalico Equipment Company, Denver; Green Valley Construction, Avondale; Eric Haak, Elverson; Harry Jacobs, Inc., Wagontown; Craig Myers, Honeybrook; Harry Schlimme, Elverson; Twyford Construction Company, Oxford; and Stauffer Repair Shop, Reamstown; Agway Petroleum Corporation, West Chester; Concrete Epoxy Technical Systems, Trevose; General Crushed Stone, Downingtown; Hancor, Inc, Murrysville; and Samuel Rice and Son, West Chester

Technical assistance on conservation practices was provided by the Soil Conservation Service staff from Chester and several surrounding counties.—SM

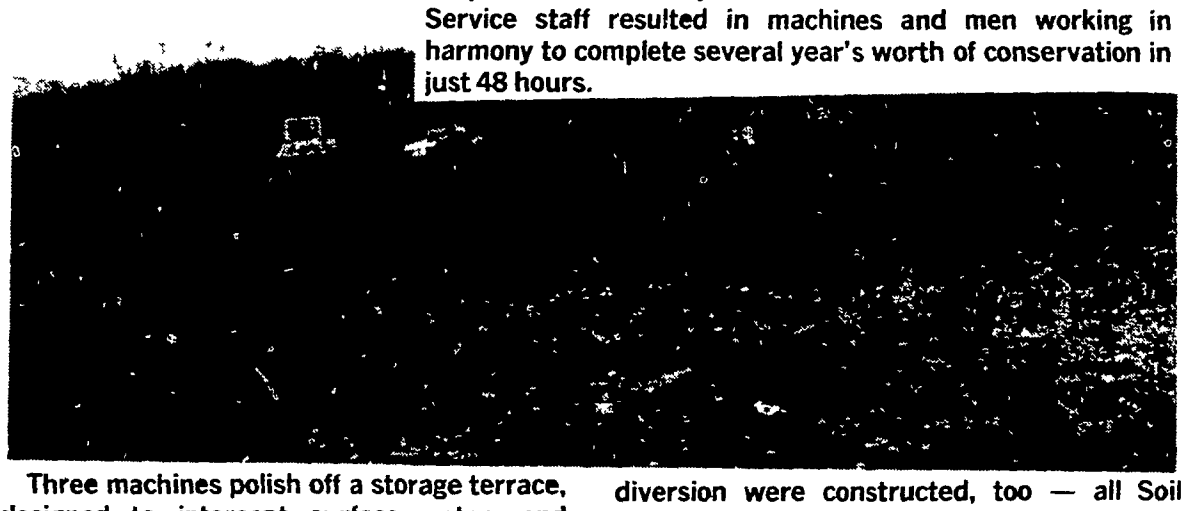
Visitors look over a sketch of the conservation plan for the Myrick Center. The Chester County Conservation District and the Brandywine Valley Association hosted a conservation field day there on Tuesday and Wednesday. The 212-acre farm was donated to BVA last year and will serve as a nature education center and model farm.



Engineering equipment checks the progress of the farm pond being carved out by a Caterpillar 955 frontend loader.

Gravel pours out of the backhoe's bucket and into the trench to blanket a 4-inch drain tile, designed to intercept underground water and carry it to a livestock water trough.

Lines and symbols sketch the conservation projects completed in two-days at the Conservation Field Day. The cooperative efforts by contractors and Soil Conservation Service staff resulted in machines and men working in harmony to complete several year's worth of conservation in just 48 hours.



Three machines polish off a storage terrace, designed to intercept surface water, and release its safely through underground pipes to a stable outlet. Gradient terraces and a diversion were constructed, too — all Soil Conservation Service methods to control water and erosion.

Legislative roundup

to allow owners of family farms to pass their operations along to their children.

He said he expects to do whatever work is necessary to help agriculture become the number one industry in Pennsylvania.

He noted there are a number of fine agricultural laws currently on the books in Pennsylvania but said he sees a need for new legislation to improve on several of them.

HB 143, a bill which would allow establishment of agricultural areas, is one such measure which could improve existing laws. It would slow the loss of farmland to non-farm applications.

Grieco also said he expects to introduce and promote a comprehensive noxious weed bill early in his tenure as Ag Chairman.

He said he basically supports the Grange position against autumn olive and multiflora rose

Grieco said he would be using last year's proposed noxious weed bill as a starting point for the legislation he would sponsor

Last year's bill, which died when the legislative year ended, would have allowed the Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture to declare a plant a noxious weed after review by a noxious weed board. Under current rules, a new law must be passed every time a plant is to be declared a noxious weed.

Vice Chairman of the Ag Committee Noah Wenger, Stevens, said Grieco is a good man, a good man for the job, a man who will serve the farm community well.

Wenger, a Lancaster Countian popular with the ag community, was not considered for the chairmanship because he currently lacks the seniority for such a position. He will continue as Vice Chairman.

Grieco said he would rely heavily on long-time legislative aides, such as Jack Grey, for advice and technical help on agricultural measures

Grieco, pointing out he was completing only his first full day as Ag Committee Chairman, asked the farm community to give him a chance to get started in his job.

"I'll be happy to work with all you fellows," he said referring to farmers and their representatives

USDA sets 1982 wheat quota

WASHINGTON, D C — A 1982 national wheat marketing quota of 2 459 billion bushels was announced this week by Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block.

The announcement is required under permanent legislation which has been suspended through the 1981 crop by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 Block said Congress may pass a new law to once again suspend the permanent legislation, in which case today's announcement will be rendered moot

To become effective, marketing quotas must be approved by two-thirds of the producers voting in a referendum held not later than Aug. 1. If approved, quotas would limit the quantity of wheat which a producer could market without penalty The date for this referendum will be announced later, if necessary

The U S Department of Agriculture is required to announce a national wheat marketing quota whenever it is determined, based on a formula in the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, that–in the absence of quotas--the supply of wheat would be in excess of demand. Block said USDA has made such determination for the 1982 wheat crop

Block said no further announcement is being made now on other marketing quota aspects of the 1982 wheat program because the expected new legislation would make these announcements unnecessary. If it becomes necessary to make further program announcements concerning marketing quotas for the 1982 crop, they will be made before the referendum is held and will include – the national wheat acreage allotment;

– apportionment of the national wheat acreage allotment to the states; and – designation of commercial wheat-producing areas.

In 1977, a similar situation arose and a 1978 national wheat marketing quota was announced, but the required referendum was postponed by special legislation. The Food and Agriculture Act of 1977, enacted Sept. 29, 1977, suspended marketing quotas through the 1981 crop.

Chester County forms equine council

CHESTER SPRINGS — The newly-formed Chester County Equine Council is seeking the support of all concerned horsemen and horsewomen interested in presenting a unified voice relevant to pertinent issues and problems facing equine activities.

The Executive Board has recently completed the by-laws of the Council with the primary aims including bringing together people representing various horse clubs, trail riding associations, hunt clubs, equine businesses and individuals willing to work togethern concerning legislation influencing the horse industry.

This will encompass the use of public lands for horse activities, including trail riding, the development of educational programs and activities for horsemen, and in general the promotion of and protection of the compatible interest of all of its members.

A primary concern involves the large number of land tracts threatened by development in almost all of our townships.

The time is now to create representation on our zoning boards and a formidable number of backers to encourage legislation which would not only create new equestrian trails, but preserve and maintain the existing ones, the Council says.

Open space involving foxhunting as well as pleasure riding is in danger in many vital areas, and the only answer to their protection is our involvement. Efforts must be initiated by those who use this land, and interest in the space preservation must be expressed in force to those branches of government that control their use, the Council says.

Someone must start to become involved with the problems that beset horseowners - someone must care enough to provide education to the public regarding our activities - someone must be willing to work to contact the proper authorities concerned with the legislation that will determine our future in all phases.

This Council is designed for the horse owner, and anyone interested in equine in any way; to enlighten non-horsemen and particularly various levels of Government, and to in general act as a "watch-dog" on dwindling space and on legislation which may harm the horse industry. Without the strong support of horsemen the group will lose teeth — we must have the backing of those concerned in the county, the group says.

If you are interested in the future of Chester County's equine activities please contact Cheryl Moran at the Extension Service, Paul B. Dague Bldg., 235 W. Market Street, West Chester, PA 19380 215/696-3500.

The first general meeting will be held on Tuesday, May 12 at New Bolton Center, Kennett Square, n the Widener Amphitheatre. Doors will open at 7 with the meeting beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Yearly dues for the Council have been set at $5 for adults and $2 for youth under 18.

Paul Konhaus, Mechanicsburg, the Turkey Industryman of the Year, also was honored. The owner of Konhaus Farm, a retail marketing business, Konhaus raises 50,000 turkeys for his three stores where he employs over 200 people.

Konhaus farms 700 acres in Cumberland County, and has been raising turkeys for about 45 years He was named Master Farmer in 1960.

Member and staff of the Pennsylvania General Assembly also were recognized. They included: Senator Edward Helfrick, Majority Chairman of the Senate Agricultural Committee; Senator Patrick Stapleton, Minority Chairman of the Senate Agricultural Committee; Representative Samuel Hayes, Jr., House Majority Leader; Representative Noah Wenger, Vice Chairman of House Agricultural Committee; Neal Buss and William Sonntag, Senate Agricultural Committee; and Jack Grey and Warren Lamm, House Agricultural Committee.

Also taking part in the evening's festivities was the president of United Egg Producers, Al Pope. Mixing business with pleasure, Pope discussed some of the major issues the egg cooperatives are working on.

Pope said UEP is constantly working on the nutrition issue created by the cholesterol controversy. And improving the grading standards is another key issue. But the hottest issue currently is animal welfare, he said.

The UEP president explained the organization has recently appointed a director of animal welfare, becoming the first commodity group to take this type of action.

"UEP is more interested in animal welfare than its advocates," Pope stated. He listed three steps UEP has taken on the matter:

— an industry code of good management procedures has been developed;

— it explains the industry situation, describing beak trimming, force molt, and that chickens have better mental health when kept in cages than on open range; and — it has developed a certification program for producers.

"I'm excited about our animals welfare policy," he exclaimed. "We're doing a good job — 98 percent of the producers are already doing what's planned. But it's an emotional issue for producers — they tend to get upset."

Grangers celebrate Pa. Grange Week

BY SHEILA MILLER

HERSHEY — More than 150 Grangers from across Pennsylvania converged at the Convention Center here on Tuesday evening to celebrate the proclamation of Pennsylvania Grange Week, April 19-26.

Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell presented Governor Dick Thornburgh's official proclamation to State Grange Master Charles Wismer. Hallowell remarked, "The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Thornburgh Administration are striving to help farmers work together more than ever before."

On hand for the evening banquet were 19 of the 29 state legislators who are members of the Grange, along with Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Luther Snyder.

Making the most of his attentive audience, State Master Wismer highlighted the Grange's concerns. He commented the Pennsylvania Grange is:

- concerned about the agricultural budget which is not felt to be a fair share of the Governor's budget;
- in favor of increased gas taxes to provide adequate funding to repair rural roads and bridges;
- in favor of turning Class 6 roads back, on a voluntary basis, to local municipalities;
- in favor of the present State Store system;
- for a noxious weed bill to provide an easier process to declare certain weeds as noxious, especially multiflora rose;
- for welfare reform so needy people are helped and people taking advantage of the system are cut;
- in favor of stray voltage research as the number one project for agricultural research funding; and
- opposed to the Scenic River Act and its eminent domain provision which limits the development of hydroelectric plants.

Wismer highlighted some of the new programs offered by the Grange this year, including the insurance program and the food program. The food program offers various commodities to members at a reduced price and is run in cooperation with Eastern Milk Producers' Cooperative, Canton.

Speaking to the group on liberty, generosity, and patriotism was Dieter Krieg, editor of Farmshine.

Prior to the evening's festivities, several afternoon sessions of the legislative and energy committees were held with 30 Grange members in attendance. They heard from state and utility representatives on a number of 'hot' topics.

Gary German of the Department of Environmental Resources spoke to them about the revised state regulations relating to food establishments. These regulations require all food sold to the public to be prepared in a licensed kitchen and not in the home, and ban homecanned foods.

These are not new regulations, having been on the books since 1945 and updated in 1968. However, German, who is chief of the Division of Food Protection, said the current proposed revisions are designed to clarify the outdated and bureaucratic terminology in the regulations, according to Linda Boyer, the Grange public relations officer.

"He opened up a can of worms," she said, citing the Grange's concerns on how these revisions could affect their kitchens, along with those of churches and fairs.

Boyer noted the DER official explained the regulations don't apply to private functions of the Grange where meals can be cooked outside of licensed kitchen and served to members. However, if the Grange Hall is serving any outside group, a license is required.

German assured the Grange members the new revisions would not affect their food establishments any more than in the past, Boyer said.

Other topics of discussion included: the new food bill, which would put all food inspection under the Department of Agriculture; ag districts; fertilizer law; road and bridge bonding and the SWAP tax; annual versus semi-annual vehicle inspections; and nuclear power plants.

State Grange Master Charles Wismer accepts the official proclamation signed by Governor Thornburgh declaring Pennsylvania Grange Week. Making the presentation is Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell.

After a century of exploration, the United States has more than half a million producing oil wells. Saudi Arabia has only about 725. Yet on the average, each Saudi well pumps 800 times as much oil as its American counterpart. Altogether, Saudi wells can outproduce U.S. wells by more than a million barrels a day.

1980 wool payments up

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sheep producers will receive about $36 million in federal incentive payments on the wool they sold in 1980, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official said Friday.

This compares with $32 million paid last year on 1979 marketings.

Edward Hews, acting administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said the current shorn wool support price is $1 23 per pound but the 1980 national average market price for shorn wool was 88.1 cents a pound, a difference of 34.9 cents.

Dividing the difference (34.9 cents) by the average market price (88.1 cents) results in a 1980 payment rate of 39.6 percent, compared with a payment rate of 33.3 percent in 1979, Hews said. The payment rate is the amount required to bring the average market price up to the support price.

Hews said the wool program encourages the production of higher quality wool because the more producers receive from sales, the more they receive in government incentive payments.

Producer payments are determined by multiplying the payment rate (39.6 percent) times the net dollar return received from wool sales.

Hews also said producers will receive $1.40 per hundredweight in federal payments for unshorn lambs they sold or slaughtered in 1980. This payment is to compensate growers for wool on live lambs they marketed, he said.

Incentive payment checks are prepared by USDA's Kansas City commodity office. When payments are computed, the office withholds 2.5 cents a pound from wool payments and 12.5 cents per hundredweight from lamb payments. This money later is forwarded to the American Sheep Producers' Council to finance advertising, sales promotion and related market development activities.

USDA will not make incentive payments on mohair sold in 1980 because the average market price of $3.50 a pound was above the announced support level of $2.903 a pound.

Rainfall a mixed blessing in world crop outlook

LANCASTER — Rainfall helped crop conditions in the United States and parts of Europe last week, but caused problems for crops in China and South America, according to a weekly report issued today by the Joint Agricultural Weather Facility of the U.S. Departments of Commerce and Agriculture.

Highlights of the report follow:

–United States. Very mild temperatures were accompanied by beneficial rains across most of the Corn Belt, the Great Lakes and east from the central Mississippi Valley. Cooler weather moved into the Pacific Northwest.

Rain in northwest Kansas and southwest Oklahoma aided winter grains. Limited moisture in other areas caused some crop stress, particularly in the Northern Texas - Oklahoma Panhandle regions.

–China. Heavy rain continued south of the Yangtze River with reports received of flooding in Hunad, Jiangxi and Fujian. This has created problems for newly sown crops. Most winter wheat regions received only light rainfall.

Severe moisture deficits have not developed yet, but warm weather has encouraged winter grain growth and increased crop water needs in dry parts of Hebei, necessitating increased irrigation.

–South America. Rain delayed Argentina's crop harvest last week. To date, 35 percent of the sorghum and 40 percent of the corn have been harvested. The soybean harvest in just underway.

In Brazil, dry weather aided crop harvesting, but in the south where the soybean harvest is beginning, continued dryness has reduced soil moisture reserves considerably.

–Mexico. Heavy rainfall in March over northwestern watersheds increased irrigation water supplies to a point where they are adequate for most spring and summer crops.

–USSR. Above normal rain in eastern European USSR and below normal rainfall in the west were recorded last week.

Soil moisture was good to somewhat excessive, and it appears that field work has not been seriously hindered. Temperatures rose to hear normal in the winter grain belt, permitting renewed crop growth.

Above-normal March precipitation improved the spring grain-sowing outlook and helped planting conditions for cotton as well.

--Europe. Soil moisture remained in good supply in most countries due to substantially above-normal March precipitation. Continued rainfall further improved growing conditions in Portugal and northern Spain.

Adequate moisture conditions prevailed in northern Italy, but moisture is only marginal in southern Spain.

–India. Dry weather provided more favorable harvest conditions in the winter grain areas of Pakistan and India. No serious losses are expected from last month's unfavorable cool, damp harvest conditions.

–Northwestern Africa. Very light rainfall in northern Morocco helped winter grains ease through the filling stage. Further potential yield losses due to dryness are now unlikely, but production from this area will be far below normal.

Rainfall in south Moroccan winter grain areas has been insufficient to produce a crop. In Algeria and Tunisia, dry weather returned following the previous week's abundant rainfall.

Below normal March rainfall in some areas had dimmed crop prospects, but current moisture supplied should assure near-normal yields.

–South Africa. Two weeks of mild, dry weather in April indicate the autumn retreat of the Intertropcial Convergence Zone which is associated with the wet season in the Maize Triangle. The corn harvest has begun with favorable weather.

MCMP board elects officers

BALTIMORE, MD. — At a reorganization meeting last Friday, the Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers Board of Directors elected officers for the 1981-82 year.

Fred G. Butler, Sr. of Inwood, W. Va. was chosen to serve as president, replacing Herbert W. Wessel, Jr who declined to run for re-election. Butler formerly was vice president of the board.

Owner and operator of a 1500 acre farm, Butler has 300 head of dairy cattle, replacement heifers and Holstein steers. He and his wife, Norma Gene, have two children. Fred, Jr., 22, is a graduate of Potomac State and is now active in the family dairy business. Daughter Judy Rae, 19, is a nursing student at Sheperd College.

Butler, a West Virginia native, has been active in both agricultural and community affairs He is vice president of the West Virginia State Farm Bureau, treasurer of the National Milk Producers Federation, and is one of three farmers in the state of West Virginia recently appointed by the state Commissioner of Agriculture to develop a lamb slaughter facility in West Virginia.

For the past 15 years Butler has been a member of the Martinsburg-Berkley County Chamber of Commerce Board of Education 12 years and was appointed by Governor Jay Rockefeller to serve on the West Virginia Labor Management Advisory Commission.

The dairyman is a 32nd Degree Mason and boasts a perfect attendance record during 29 years of membership with the Lions Club for which he currently is chairman of the Council of Governors. He is a life-long member of the Arden United Methodist Church and is active in many facets of that organization.

Fred G. Butler

As a youth, Butler was active in 4-H for 11 years and president of Future Farmers of America. He is a member of the 4-H All-Stars and was West Virginia Outstanding Young Farmer in 1963. He was honored by the West Virginia Future Farmers of America as Agribusinessman of 1977.

In addition to his farming operation, the new cooperative president is owner and president of Wright Motor Company, a Chrysler dealership in Matinsburg.

Butler said, "It is a very critical time for the dairy industry with milk production at such a high level. It is the dairy farmers' responsibility to discipline themselves in controlling production and the cooperative board and management's concern to try and pick up additional Class I sales for the farmer."

MCMP's new vice president is Samuel B. Foard, Jr. of Street, Md. He is owner and operator of an 800-acre dairy farm in Harford County which is part of his family's original homestead. He began shipping milk to Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers in 1948 and now milks 250 Holstein cows.

Foard and his wife, the former Dorothy Amos, are both natives of Harford County. They have four daughters. Connie Richardson and her husband, Frank, now live and work on the Foard farm. Another daughter, Edie Jones, and her husband, Steve, are crop farmers in Morrison, Tenn., but were formerly Maryland milk producers. Carol, 23, is an occupational therapist in Fayetteville, N.C. and Kristine, 11, is still at home.

Foard is chairman of the Harford County Ag Land Preservation Committe, a member of the Soil Conservation Advisory Board, Equipment Division Committee chairman at MCMP and vice president of Holly Milk Cooperative, Inc. near Boiling Springs, Pa.

The family are members of the Emery Methodist Church.

"As vice president of Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers it will be my goal to encourage cooperation among members and between cooperatives," Foard stated.

Re-elected as corporate officers at the meeting were Boyd C. Cook, of Boonsboro, Md. secretary, and LeRoy E. Norfolk, Jr., of Randallstown, Md. treasurer, R.L. Strock of Towson, Md. will continue as business manager for the organization.

TMI hearings cover food plan

HARRISBURG — Testimony was scheduled to be given this week by Leroy C. Corbin Jr., Chief of the Division of Food Control, Pa. Dept. of Agriculture, in the continuing hearings being held concerning the restart of Three Mile Island's Unit 1.

Corbin's testimony was in response to the contention that the PDA's emergency plan has no provisions for criteria for the reactivation through normal restricted usage of previously contaminated property, equipment, foodstuffs and water supplies.

Corbin explained that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration criteria for reactivation through normal or restricted usage of previously contaminated foodstuffs is contained in Federal Register Vol. 43, No. 242, Dec. 15, 1978 The control and use of contaminated food and animal feeds will be based on laboratory analysis of samples using this FDA guidance, he said. The Agriculture Plan is Section VI (Commonwealth Disaster Operations Plan, ANNEX E, Appendix 7) provides the guidance for handling of foodstuff which will be the basis for advisory information to the public, according to Corbin.

Section 1705 of the Pennsylvania Administrative Code of 1929 authorizes the Department of Agriculture:

—To enforce the laws of the Commonwealth relating to the production, manufacture, transportation and sale of foods used for man, as well as every article entering into and intended for use as an ingredient in the preparation of foods for man;

—For the purpose of enforcing such laws, from time to time, to purchase from wholesale or retail dealers samples of any food or drink, and have the same analyzed or examined, and prosecute the sale of adulterated, misbranded, or deleterious food or drink;

—For the purpose of enforcing such laws, to enter into any place where food is produced, manufactured, sold, or offered for sale, or kept, and to seize all articles of food produced, manufactured, sold, or offered for sale, or kept in violation of such laws.

Corbin further stated that the Region VI Office of the Department, located in Summerdale, is staffed with seven food inspectors and two milk sanitarians. The Department has reacted to past disaster situations, such as floods by temporarily relocating food inspectors from other Regions to the disaster Region; this action would be utilized when deemed appropriate The Department has 50 food inspectors and 22 milk sanitarians available for disaster recovery work. Further, the Department has utilized personnel from other Bureaus for non-professional duties directly related to disaster recovery work.

The Department has work sharing agreements with DER and FDA for personnel and laboratory assistance.

GIGANTIC SELECTION IN Lancaster Farming's CLASSIFIEDS

Cost of farm accidents encourages safety

COCHRANVILLE — Sometimes it's easier to attract attention by appearing to the pocketbook rather than to common sense.

In keeping with this theory, farm accident studies are now being conducted in selected states to determine the real costs of farm-related accidents. According to extension farm safety specialist Ron Jester, once farmers learn the amount of money lost because of senseless accidents, they may try harder to prevent them.

Any farmer recognizes the value of good reliable employees, says Jester. Such help is indispensable at critical times during the year—such as planting, farrowing and harvest. The loss of employees at these times creates undesirable and costly situations.

The accident studies have shown that disabling accidents in Delaware in 1977 resulted in an average of 14 days lost from usual activities and an average medical expense per accident of almost $600.

With the rapidly rising cost of medical, hospital and other expenses since 1977, a disabling accident today would cost approximately $1000.

In addition, a Purdue University study of a corn and hog operation concluded that under certain conditions, the farmer's time was worth $600 an hour during planting and no less than $100 during the rest of the year.

Once the farmer realizes the high financial value attached to his time, Jester says, he should strive to keep his employees healthy and able-bodied so that he doesn't end up as one of their replacements.

Who can measure in dollar and cents the value to any one of us of a hand, a foot, or an eye? It is more than good business to be free of injury and impairment.

Just an unthinking moment, a careless move or an unguarded act may trigger action resulting in the loss of a finger or even more serious injury.

You alone can develop a safety state of mind that will protect you from injury. And there is no question about it, the rewards will amply repay you for the effort.

Emphasizing that a small investment in safety pays big dividends, Jester quotes an Iowa farmer who said, "I bought a roll-over bar for my son's tractor--they are cheaper than caskets."

Safety is a good investment.

Study says Pa. food system in trouble

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

HARRISBURG — "Pennsylvania's food system is in trouble."

This is a basic premise and conclusion of a study released this week in Harrisburg by Rodale Press, of Emmaus, publishers of "Organic Farming" and other magazines in the gardening and health fields.

At a news conference in the Capitol Building attended by Lt. Gov William W. Scranton III, Robert Rodale said that the state's food production system is suffering from "Detroit Disease."

"Like Detroit that continued to build big cars after the end of the cheap energy era," Rodale said, "the Pennsylvania food system is turning out a product that requires more energy than is needed or wanted."

Title of the approximate $30,000 study, funded and conducted by the Rodale organization, summarizes the alterative directions seen for Pennsylvania concerning food production. Title of the study is "The Pennsylvania Food System: Crash or Self-Reliance."

The study concludes that Pennsylvania is too dependent on the importation of food from as far away as California – a practice that not only needlessly drives up the cost but leaves Pennsylvania wide open to possible disruption in food supplies.

According to the study, Pennsylvania imports 73 percent of all of its food at an annual cost of $8.4 billion dollars

"A total of $400 million is added to the cost of this food to pay just for its transportation into the state," Rodale pointed out.

The study also said that such food must be picked before it is ripe and thus comes into the state less tasty and nutritious than it might be if grown locally.

Another of the major problems facing the food system and Pennsylvania agriculture is the continuing loss of farmland due to development and soil erosion, the study emphasizes.

"Intensive chemical farming, with continuous planting of row crops and use of heavy equipment that compacts the soil is making the soil erosion problem even worse," according to the study.

"If the amount of land being farmed continues to decline as it has since 1950, Pennsylvania will have no farms by the year 2030 – a mere 50 years away."

The study stresses the vulnerability of the state food system due to supply disruptions that might be caused by such things as an oil embargo, a labor dispute or drought in Florida or California

Among its major general recommendations, the study concludes that Pennsylvania must get started toward better food self-reliance.

"Pennsylvania can produce much more of its own food," the study states, "and a good place to begin might be with vegetables."

"To produce all our vegetables within the state would require about 335,000 acres – 4.5 percent of our total farmland. Pennsylvania has the climate, soil types and land to be totally self-reliant in vegetable crops.

"What is perhaps needed more than anything to bring about this change are local markets so our farmers can be sure of selling their produce for a fair profit."

Other recommendations listed in the study to increase food self-reliance include expansion of the role of home gardens and an increase in local fertilizer production.

But the state can never become totally food self-reliant based on consumers' present diets.

The study points out that certain crops, such as oranges, bananas, rice, sugar, peanuts, coffee, tea and cocoa, can't be grown in the state and there isn't enough land to produce all the meat that is consumed.

"To meet all our food needs – with the exception of beef and items which cannot be grown here -- would take approximately 4.6 million acres, about 60 percent of our total cropland," the study states.

"Just to produce all our beef locally would require about 9 million acres, 20 percent more farmland than the state has.

"But if we took the land left after meeting all our other food needs and grew beef on most of it and cut our consumption by 80 percent (to about 24 pounds per person yearly) and substituted wheat, potatoes and beans, Pennsylvania could be almost totally self-reliant."

The study admits that total self-sufficiency is a questionable goal in itself. And perhaps the goals should be reducing food costs, averting the risk of supply unavailability when that risk is unacceptable and increasing the economic viability of Pennsylvania.

Concerning the cut in beef consumption mentioned in the report, the study says it shows one way that the state could cope with a serious food emergency.

Three major recommendations are outlined in the study to move Pennsylvania toward a more self-reliant food system "with its accompanying economic and nutritional benefits:"

– A state plan for a food system to increase self-reliance and economic viability while decreasing the potential for supply disruption.

–An emergency state plan for feeding Pennsylvanians during a supply disruption and "given the current state of international affairs, national economy and state vulnerability, not to formulate one soon would be irresponsible."

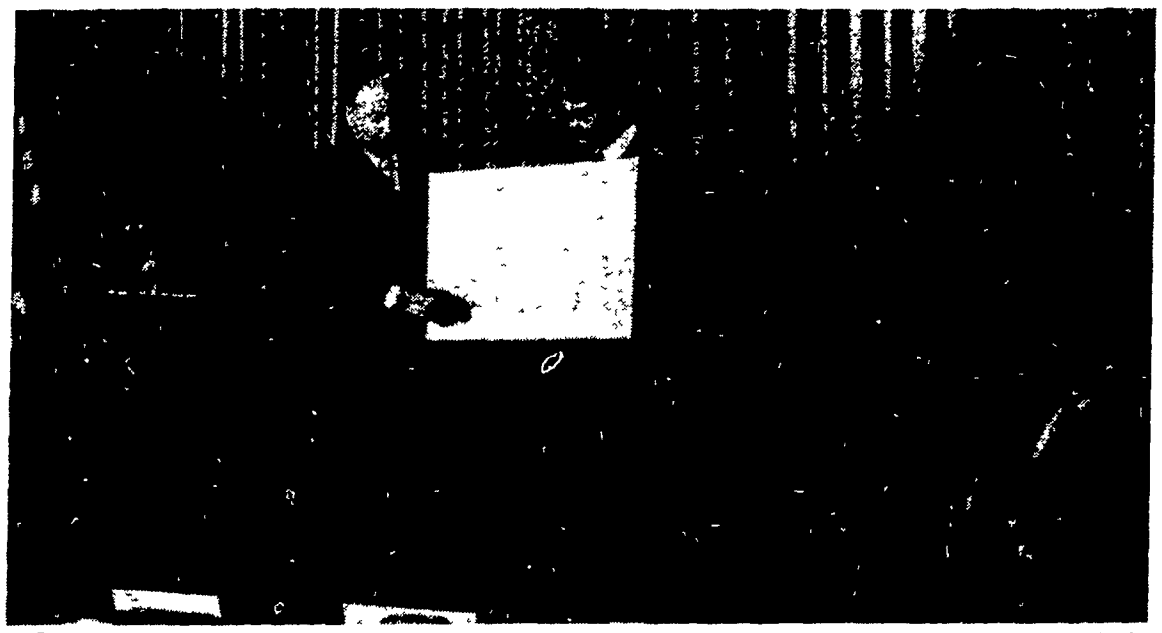
–A more active role by the Pennsylvania consumer in his or her own food system that will make the overall system more economical.

More definitive recommendations for a state food system plan include protection of all remaining prime farmland, strong incentive and enforcement of widespread and effective soil conservation programs, more incentives for farmers to produce a greater diversity of crops for local consumption, reorienting agricultural research into the era of more costly energy and preserve and strengthen the family farm in such ways as guaranteed state loans to beginning farmers with deferred or reduced payments until five years after start-up.

"The $7.00 loaf of bread and the $45.00 jar of instant coffee will be a fact by the end of this century unless we act now to protect our own farms," Rodale said in his opening remarks to the news conference.

And the study ends by stating:

"If Pennsylvania is truly concerned about the condition and future of its food supply, then the state must be willing to spend the time and money to develop a realistic plan of action, and then to spend even more time and money to see this plan modified, accepted and implemented. The time to begin is now."



Graph tracing the declining number of farms in Pennsylvania is explained by Richard Harwood, left, director of the Rodale Press Organic Gardening and Farming Research Center; and Medard Gabel, director of the study, which states that Pennsylvania's food system is in trouble. Seated at the right is Robert Rodale, head of Rodale Press.

Head of Rodale Press, Robert Rodale, emphasizes the rising price of food expected for Pennsylvania if the state does not become more self-sufficient and the decline in farmland due to development and erosion is not checked. He said bread could reach $7.00 a loaf by the end of the century.

Five films will be shown between 7:30 p.m. and 10:00 p.m., following the Association's business meeting at 7 p.m.

The meeting and film festival will take place at the York Bank, which is located at Sherman and Market Sts., York. A $1 donation is requested to cover the cost of the films.

The schedule of films to be shown is as follows: 7:30 Solar Frontier; 8:05 Sun Builders; 8:35 The Solar Greenhouse; 9:05 Sun Power for Farms; 9:35 The Power to Change.

Donaldson wins Pa. FFA award

FAIRFIELD — David G. Donaldson, son of Mr. and Mrs Guy F. Donaldson, R3, Gettysburg has been selected Pennsylvania State FFA Proficiency winner in Fruit Production, according to David W. Teets, advisor of the Mason Dixon FFA Chapter at Fairfield High School

Each year the National FFA Foundation provides awards for members who have demonstrated outstanding achievement in 22 different proficiency areas. Donaldson will receive a $100 check and a certificate at the State Mid-Winter FFA Convention in January. He will also compete in the Northeast United States competition in July and if successful, will be eligible for National recognition at the National FFA. Convention at Kansas City in November of this year.

David G. Donaldson

Donaldson began his FFA career as a 9th grade student at Fairfield High School in September of 1977 and during the same year earned the Star Greenhand Award.

During the following years he became a very active member of the local chapter serving as treasurer, vice-president and president. He also served as Adams County FFA President in 1979-1980.

Agronomy, tractor driving, farm mechanics, apple judging, project book and parliamentary procedure are some of the contests he was involved with on the county, area and state levels.

He served as both local and county delegate to the Pennsylvania and National Convention and received his State Keystone degree in January of 1980.

He has earned the Star Chapter Farmer Award, Leadership Award, Scholarship Award and the DeKalb Accomplishment Award as the outstanding senior of the Mason Dixon FFA Chapter.

Donaldson graduated in June of 1980 and is employed on his parent's fruit farm where he plans to continue his involvement in the fruit industry.

Another Khapra infestation confirmed in New Jersey

LANCASTER — Another infestation of khapra beetles–the world's most destructive pest of stored grains and cereal products–has been confirmed, this time at two military warehouses in Bayonne, N.J., according to an official of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"This infestation, which brings the total to 19 found during recent months, was found during continuing routine inspections at the Military Ocean Terminal warehouses," said Don Woodham, technical coordinator for USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

The empty warehouses, owned by the Department of the Army, are each about 2.5 million cubic feet. They are used primarily for "stripping" or cleaning military goods returning from countries in the Far East.

During stripping, equipment being shipped is inspected for the presence of any "hitchhiking" pest hazardous to the health of humans, animals or plants, Woodham said.

"The Army is considering fumigating the premises," he said.

Of the 18 confirmed khapra beetle infestations found during the ongoing APHIS khapra beetle program, 15 sites have been treated, one business is in the process of being treated with a high pressure insecticide spray, and two facilities have not yet been treated until a course of action is decided by the owners, Woodham said.

"The three untreated businesses, in Lancaster, Pa, Brooklyn, N.Y., and in Mechanicsburg, Pa., all remain under strict quarantine," he said.

The khapra beetle, which is native to India, causes millions of dollars of damage to stored grains and cereal products annually world-wide. It was first detected recently in a New Jersey spice company in October 1980.

USDA seeks changes in shell egg standards

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is seeking comments until June 16 on a proposal to change grade standards for shell eggs.

"We evaluated how effective grade standards are in today's marketplace," said Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Quality Service. "We found the standards for shell eggs need to be changed to reflect present technology in the industry, to make the grading system easier and to make the grade standards more uniform."

One of the changes would raise the maximum permissible percentage of "checks" - cracked shells - in shell eggs at retail stores

"This change would merely align the tolerance for 'checks' to more accurately reflect what is already happening under today's egg production and marketing practices," Houston said. "Although 'checks' have cracked shells, the shell membranes are intact and the contents do not leak."

Another change would increase the minimum percent of "A" quality eggs required for eggs to be labeled "U.S. Grade A" at both shipping point and retail store The percent would be true for "AA" grade at shipping point, but the percent would be adjusted downward at destination to reflect normal quality loss during marketing

Other changes would eliminate the C quality classification for eggs, the Fresh Fancy quality and Grade A quality control programs, the two U.S. Procurement Grades and the three lower U.S. wholesale grades. "These five grades would be dropped because they're obsolete," Houston said.

The changes being proposed are basically the same as those proposed May 27, 1980, except USDA has decided not to eliminate U.S. Grade AA because of comments received, Houston said.

The proposal was published in the April 17 Federal Register, available in local libraries. Copies are being distributed to about 500 retail representatives, state and local agriculture and consumer affairs officials and consumer representatives as well as industry trade associations and packers operating under USDA's voluntary shell egg grading program.

Comments in duplicate may be sent until June 16 to Regulations Coordination Division, Attn: Annie Johnson, rm. 2637-S, Food Safety and Quality Service, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Fire fighters plan spring sale

SAFE HARBOR — Members of The Lancaster Forest Fire Crew will hold their annual Spring Benefit Public Sale on Saturday, May 16, at the Fort Holbrook Fire Base & Training Center. The Sale will begin at 9:30 A.M.

Auctioneers for the benefit event will be Raymond Miller and Rufus Geib. In addition to the benefit sale, the volunteers of the Forest Fire Crew will also operate a food stand throughout the event, at their Station.

Donations for the auction and the food stand are invited and consignment lots to be sold on commission during the benefit auction are welcomed. Persons who are interested in contributing, or in consignment/commission sales are urged to call the Forest Fire Crew at 717/872-7298.

A special feature of the benefit this year will be a 'covering sale' for afghans, linens, quilts, table cloths, bed spreads, etc., which will be held just after lunchtime. Additional coverings are also invited for this portion of the sale.

The Fort Holbrook Fire Base, still under construction, is located on Oak Road, just off River Road, between the villages of Cresswell/Highville to the North, and Safe Harbor, a short distance to the South, in Manor Township.

Proceeds from the annual Benefit Public Sale will be used exclusively to help meet operating expenses of the Fire Crew. In addition to wildfire control efforts, the Crew is involved in youth programs, fire service, and fire prevention - educational activity. The all-volunteer wildfire company presently carries a 'field force' of 48 men and women.

TERRE HILL CONCRETE STAVE SILOS

THE PATZ SOLUTION: Reliable Year-Round Feeding

You know the problems caused by hard packed and frozen silage Patz gives you two solutions to the problem — the Model RD 790 ring-drive silo unloader and the Model 985 surface-drive silo unloader

Both unloaders feature a double-hook gathering chain with hardened steel cutters and claws that rip through frozen and packed silage When you push the button, you know you can count on a smooth feeding operation

Evaluate our powered silo wall cutters Spring tension holds 4 self sharpening steel cutter blades in place to follow the curve of the silo wall This keeps silage from building up along the walls, so you can be sure that you're getting all the feed where it belongs in the feeder and not stuck to the walls.

Want to know more about the Patz system? See your Patz dealer He'll show you Patz quality and reliability two important words to a farmer like you

Researchers scramble to hatch stronger eggs

ELIZABETHTOWN — The average U S laying hen produced a record 243 marketable eggs last year, but the total could have been as high as 260 per hen if only eggs had sturdier shells

Shell breaks are a costly problem

First of all, breakage means a direct cash loss to producers," says USDA economist Allen Baker. 'However, breakage creates all kinds of other problems as well \ppearance, for example One broken egg in a carton can soil other eggs, causing them to be classified as 'dirties,' which reduces their market value "

"Dirties" can't be sold to consumers as edible eggs Instead, they are diverted to "breakers," sold at a lower price for use in processed foods

"A more serious problem — quality deterioration and possible bacterial contamination — can leave producers or processors with a carton of eggs of little or no market value," adds Baker

The danger of breakage begins as soon as the egg leave the hen In fact, by some research estimates, roughly seven percent of the nation's eggs never get out of the chicken house because the shells are inadequately formed or too fragile for the mechanized collection process which has probably increased the breakage problem

Fragile shells aren't likely to make it through the mechanical gathering, washing, and packing process of modern assembly-line egg production operations

Studies on breakage, completed in California during the early 1970's, indicated anywhere from 2 3 to 11 8 percent of eggs were cracked or smashed en route from the nest to the carton Most breakage (71 percent) had already occured during the initial transport, 13 percent during loading, washing, and drying, and 16 percent during weighing, grading, and packing

Just how hard would it be to make a tougher eggshell?

"Difficult, but we hope not impossible," admits USDA egg expert George Mountney, who coordinates an eggshell quality research program with scientists at 15 land grant colleges Federally funded, as well as by some state sources, the research is called Project S-131-' Eggshell Quality in Avian Species."

One S-131 researcher, David Roland of Auburn University, recommends that producers change the usual feeding time for layer hens from morning to evening, when the hen naturally starts producing calcium for eggshells

"It occurred to me that if feed goes in the hen's body as the calcification process is beginning, all the food nutrients would go directly into the bloodstream and possibly produce a stronger eggshell," Roland says

Another researcher, Joseph Soares, Jr , of the University of Maryland, is studying the relationship of vitamin D to the female hormone, estrogen

"Vitamin D is changed into estrogen by the hen's body, and we have found conclusive evidence that hens with more estrogen produce stronger eggshells," says Soares

The ' thick and thin" team at Penn State University seems to have proved out Soares' theory In experiments under the guidance of Edward Buss, selected items of hens that produce thicker than average eggshells showed a much higher percentage of natural estrogen levels in their bodies than other breeds of hens that usually produce a thinner than normal shell

Other researchers are studying the influences of housing and environment, marketing channels, and disease control on the eggshell problem S-131 research, indicates that 7 7 of every 100 eggs won't reach collection points because of weak or missing shells

Roland estimates that about five billion unusable eggs were produced — eggs worth about $60 million based on 1980 retail prices Of course, such an increase in production might have lowered retail prices — also lowering the $60 million estimate. But some producers and processors say that new markets could absorb the extra eggs without a serious blow to prices

They cite additional export possibilities, the increased demand in the processed food industry, and the increased need for eggs in fast food chains.

But sales from five billion additional eggs would not be chicken feed, even in the multi-billion dollar egg industry where producers have generally suffered losses in the last few years. Last year, producers lost an average 3 2 cents at the wholesale level for every dozen eggs sold.

This year, producers face cost increases for all inputs, particularly feed Reduced breakage could give producers a critical edge "It's logical," Roland says, "If we can improve eggshell quality and reduce breakage, producers could market something they already have "

Berks 4-H building fund reaches half-way mark

LEESPORT — The Berks County 4-H Community Center Building Fund Campaign has passed the halfway mark with 54 6 percent of the $550,000 goal reached Campaign Chairman, Ezekiel S Ketchum said $300,414 has been raised thus far in the drive.

'The key to the success of this community effort depends on how aggressively we utilize the working days remaining before the final report scheduled for June 4 to get this job done," he said

Thus far, the drive's four fund raising divisions have reported the following results.

William F. Dietrich, Sr., President of Dietrich's Milk Products, Inc , and chairman of the Reading Division, the largest fund raising unit, a total of $168,490 subscribed for 67 3 percent of its $250,000 goal; Gail Malsbury, Chairwoman of the 4-H Family Division, $82,299 or 102.8 percent of the units $80,000 goal, has been contributed Michael J. Kraynyak, Assistant Vice President, Bank of Pennsylvania, $17,690 or 14 7 percent for Berks County; and William D. Angstadt, Vice President, Reading Bone Fertilizer, $32,035 or 32 percent of the Agri-Business Division quota of $100,000.

Clyde A.B. Myers, County Extension Agent, said that groundbreaking for the Community Building will begin in June with construction during the summer and fall months, with scheduled occupancy for the latter part of the year.

When completed, the new facility will have a 10,000 square foot open area for large meetings, shows, and recreational activities with seating for 800 spectators.

Which tells eggmen more, cost or income?

ELIZABETHTOWN — Which is most important when analyzing an egg production and marketing business — cost or gross income per dozen?

One could get involved in some good arguments over the question Some will argue that cost is most important and others will argue that gross income is most important.

Yet when one recalls discussions at industry meetings over the years, by far most of the discussion centers around methods of reducing costs. Very little time is spent discussing increasing revenue except in times of low prices. Then volumes are written in trade papers and discussed at meetings about the necessity of improving the price discovery process. Sometimes price discovery seems to mean discovering always profitable prices.

Some will say that costs are most important because one cannot as an individual do anything about prices received. Of course, both costs and income are important, but of most importance is the difference between costs and income — net profits.

Least cost does not necessarily mean most profitable. In some cases it may not be profitable, while profits may accrue to a flock with higher costs. When one discusses and or analyzes costs it is necessary to consider quality and services performed

One must compare costs for a given quality and services, says Penn State Poultry Specialist Kermit Birth.

As one makes changes in management practices which are expected to reduce costs, consideration must be given to possible effects on income.

Will a change in a method of handling eggs which reduces labor increase or decrease the number of eggs with damaged shells — an increase in shell damage means decreased income whereas a decrease in shell damage means more income with no change in the price for the respective sizes and qualities.

What impact will a change in ventilation have on number of eggs produced, egg size, and shell quality?

Sometimes one must make a decision which may increase costs in one phase of the business in order to reduce costs in another aspect of the business.

However, the reduced costs in one phase must be greater than increased costs in the other phase. Increasing costs may in some situations increase income more than costs are increased.

There are factors under the control of the producer which influence the income per dozen eggs per bird or total income.

These include size distribution, percent of eggs with damaged shells, total number of eggs produced, marketing ability, and services performed, as well as others. The impact of the factors affecting income for a given producer can only be estimated through outside research studies or information for other production units.

The actual ar ount must be determined by information obtained from one's own flock, Birth says.

Perhaps shell damage is one area where changes in management techniques can aid in increasing income.

At 60 cent per dozen for grade A large eggs and 30 cents for eggs with damaged, stained, or dirty shells which are included in the crack category, each one percent of eggs of sizes above medium which are marked as cracked, stained, or dirty can reduce income received for all eggs marketed by as much a 0.3 cents per dozen, Birth figures.

Decision making requires sufficient information to determine why certain situations occur. How many in the industry know how much income was lost for each of their flocks due to the number of cracked, stained, and dirty eggs produced?

On the other side of the equation, what would it cost to make necessary changes to reduce shell damage and avoid a large part of the loss of income due to shell damage?

Does one know what effect different ventilation systems and procedures for managing these systems have on shell quality, egg numbers, and egg size for the various seasons of the year for each of the houses he owns or manages, Birth asks.

There are always more questions than answers The answers must be based on the specific situation. What may work in one situation may not work in another, he points out.

All too often changes are made in production and marketing programs without knowing what the effect will be on profits. A change may be made to reduce electric costs without considering or knowing what impact the change has on income.

To meet today's competitive challenge one must evaluate alternatives on the basis of their impact on profits, not on costs or income alone, Birth concludes.

Dairy farmers look to conservation tillage

HARRISBURG — Benefits from conservation tillage operations, such as no-till and minimum tillage, have caught the attention of dairy farmers in Pennsylvania, according to a USDA spokesman.

Many dairy farmers are looking to conservation tillage program, and its advantages.

No-till seeders, used to reseed pastures, conserve soil and water since the ground is always covered with sod. Production is maintained since the seeding is done in existing sod in the Fall. The sod is not plowed, disked and reseeded with a crop of small grain as in the past.

No-till reseeding requires one or two trips — across the field one for seeding, another if weed control is necessary. This is a time saver for the farmer.

Both no-till and chisel plowing present an opportunity to save time and get the crop planted more quickly in the Spring.

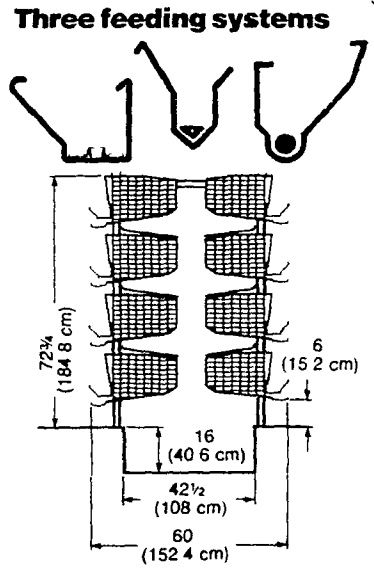
If ceiling height permits you can increase bird density even more up to 135 000 birds with the 5 High System 812 or 162 000 birds with the 6 High System 813

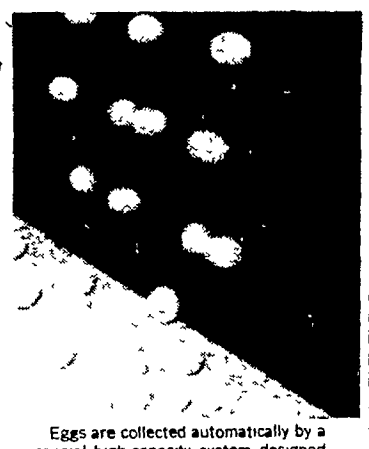
With new construction you reduce your over all investment per bird by putting more birds in a building and utilizing the otherwise wasted vertical space

The Diamond Stacked Layer Cage System is available with your choice of three feeding systems the Flat Chain F 80 Deep V or Link Chain And three watering systems troughs cups or nipples Doors are located on front of all cages Installation is fast and easy

Three feeding systems



Manure is deposited on rust proof fiber glass manure chutes under each tier of cages and removed automatically by a Diamond manure removal system proven over 12 years



Eggs are collected automatically by a special high-capacity system designed for the Stacked System Plastic or woven fabric belts are available

Let Diamond take you higher than anyone else in the business with the new Stacked Layer Cage System

Adams County to celebrate apple blossom festival

ARENDTSVILLE — It's apple blossom time!

As has been the custom for the past three decades, fruitgrowers in Adams County are inviting everyone to join in this spring spectacle of nature by hosting the annual Apple Blossom Festival The festival takes place among the 20,000 acres of fruit orchards in the county with headquarters at the South Mountain Fairgrounds, located near Arendtsville

Two days of activities are planned, on Saturday and Sunday, May 2 and 3

Highlighting Sunday's events will be the crowning of the 1981 Apple Queen, Angie Sheaffer, Biglerville R1, at 2.30 p.m. in the auditorium at the fairgrounds

The Apple Blossom Festival began nearly 30 years ago Then, before anyone heard of gas shortages or the energy crisis, sightseers embarked on leisurely drives through the orchards of Upper Adams County viewing the acres of pink and white blossoms

As time went on, the Adams County Fruitgrowers Association began scheduling the spring celebration on the first Sunday in May, the approximate time when most apples, peaches, and cherries are in full-bloom.

Eventually the crowds became so large that the South Mountain Fairgrounds became the headquarters for the Apple Blossom Sunday event where tourists could park their cars and ride guided bus tours through the orchards to view the spectacle

Later, the Adams County Poultry Association started to provide a chicken barbeque dinner at the Fairgrounds so festival goers could go to the orchard community for Sunday dinner and stay to view the orchards and see the Apple Blossom Queen be crowned

Over the years the crowds have gotten so large that this year for the first time, activities will be held for a two-day period changing the event from Apple Blossom Sunday to a weekend festival Visitors from a five-state area are expected with numerous chartered buses making reservations as early as last August

Gates to the festival open at 10 a.m on Saturday and Sunday and events are held continuously both days until 4 p m Activities include guided orchard bus tours, walking tours through the orchards, a baby-barnyard demonstration, agricultural exhibits and an entire building of craft exhibits

Sheep-shearing demonstrations will be held both days and the Adams County Sheep Association will hold a sheep-to-shawl demonstration with the shawl to be raffled-off on Sunday.

An apple pie baking contest and auction, apple pie-eating contests, and apple-bobbing contests will precede the crowning of the Apple Queen on Sunday. Apples will be available whole, in cider, apple butter, dumplings, strudel, or pies

A cafeteria-style lunch will be served on Saturday featuring lamb and pork dishes. The lunch will be provided by the Sheep Association and the South Central Pennsylvania Pork Producers Association On Sunday the Poultry Association will be serving their traditional chicken barbeque dinner. Meals will be available both days beginning at 11 a.m.

The famous apple-dessert sampler, a traditional highlight of the festival, will be open on Sunday The dessert sampler is a culinary delight consisting of homemade apple desserts donated by community residents for the festival.

For a small fee, festival goers can sample an entire plate full of mouth-watering apple confections Take-home desserts will also be on sale both days.

Admission to the festival is free and ample free parking is provided.

Adams County ranks first in the state in apple and peach production Over five million bushels of apples and 600,000 bushels of peaches are grown in the county each year with a value of over $25,000,000.

The Apple Blossom Festival is sponsored by the Adams County Fruitgrowers Association, the Adams County Poultry Association, and the Gettysburg Travel Council. For more information, contact the Gettysburg Travel Council, 35 Carlisle Street, Gettysburg, 17325 717/334-6274.

Alfalfa-fed heifers outgain those on grass

BELTSVILLE, Md. — When Holstein heifers were fed diets of either orchardgrass or alfalfa preserved as direct-cut silage with a formic acid-formaldehyde treatment, U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists found that the heifers fed alfalfa gained considerably more weight.

Keith Goerling, a scientist with USDA's Science and Education Administration, presented his research on the contrasting diets at the Large Dairy Herd Management Conference held recently in Vermont.

Alfalfa, as a legume, has a different chemical make-up than orchardgrass, including a higher percentage of protein.

USDA scientists harvested two cuttings of alfalfa and orchardgrass containing similar amounts of digestible energy. Then for a 119-day period, yearling Holstein heifers were fed solely alfalfa or orchardgrass silage.

During the four-month test, heifers given the alfalfa diet gained an average of 992 grams (2.19 pounds) per day, while those on the orchardgrass diet gained only 662 grams (1.46 pounds) per day.

"In two tests over the past four years, we have obtained similar results," says Goering, who works in the Ruminant Nutrition Laboratory of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center in Beltsville, Md.

Blood analysis during the test period showed higher levels of essential amino acids in alfalfa-fed heifers compared to those fed orchardgrass diets. The larger weight gain of heifers fed alfalfa appears to be related to higher dry matter intake.

Also, alfalfa contains less fiber and more soluble nutrients than orchardgrass.

By treating harvested forage with the formic acid-formal dehyde preservative, SEA scientists were able to harvest the alfalfa and orchardgrass when the forages had similar levels of digestible energy.

This allowed the researchers to contrast the effect that each forage had on the heifers' weight gain. This treatment also allowed direct storage of alfalfa after harvest.

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

"No Trespassing" — not a very friendly expression but one that more and more farmers are being forced to use

All along the rural routes these days, you see those signs nailed on trees and fence posts bearing such messages as no trespassing, posted, no hunting or trespassing, no admittance, and so on. Whatever the wording, the signs are there to remind folks that landowners have certain rights The signs are part of the landowners' legal way of protecting those rights

Across the land, courts have ruled that property owners have the right to defend their property. Part of that defense is to tell people they're not welcome. The courts have also ruled that because a farm is posted doesn't mean the landowner has the right to shoot trespassers or otherwise exhibit "excessive force" They have clearly said that farmers have the right to protect their property from outsiders But there are some rules farmers must follow in their dealings with invaders or potential invaders

A recent North Carolina extension publication deals with the general subject of law and the landowner, listing some rules and regulations as they apply to that state Granted, there are differences between states, but in general the laws of trespass hold up throughout the country.

Barrie Stokes author of the article, says most state laws says a landowner may not willfully or wantonly injure a trespasser.

However, as a general rule, the landowner owes only a slight duty of care toward a trespasser. What that means is that a landowner doesn't have to keep his premises safe for a would-be trespasser or provide warnings about dangerous conditions the trespasser might encounter

Courts in that state, for example, have refused to impose liability for the drowning of a trespasser in an unguarded excavation pit They also disallowed an injury claim sustained by a trespassing motorcycle rider who drove at high speed into a cable stretched across a farmer's driveway.

In that case, the court said the landowner did not act willfully and wantonly when he installed the cable to prevent trespassing.

Stokes believes the key point in the eviction of a trespasser is whether the amount of force used was or was not excessive. In general, the use of deadly force may be justified to repel an attack upon the landowner's person but would not be justified to evict a trespasser causing no serious harm to trespasser or property

What about the trespasser who refuses to leave the premises after the farmer has made his intentions clear?

In that case, Stokes thinks the farmer would be well advised to call law enforcement authorities for assistance, because any threatening act that might include deadly force could be turned against the farmer in court

A doctrine called "attractive nuisance" is a long-standing exception to the rule that landowners owe trespassers only the duty to refrain from actively harming them.

Stokes says the law recognizes that a child who goes on land without legal right or permission is a trespasser But because that person is a child, he can't be expected to exercise the care of an adult So the law imposes liability on the landowner for injury to a trespassing child resulting from a dangerous condition on the property

The "attractive nuisance" doctrine usually involves only very young children who, according to Stokes, cannot comprehend an apparent danger. And, he says, the landowner would probably be held liable only if it is not economically feasible to prevent access to the condition or to render it safe without frustrating the purpose for which it was intended.

North Carolina courts have ruled that natural bodies of water such as streams and brooks do not constitute attractive nuisances

Even an unenclosed irrigation pond is not an attractive nuisance if the landowner warns neighbor children and their parents to stay away from the pond. But merely posting a no trespassing sign probably does not constitute adequate warning, according to the expert.

When it gets right down to it, dealing with trespassers involves common sense and good judgment. The courts aren't apt to rule against a farmer who has used reasonable care and has tried to keep his property safe. On the other hand, the farmer who shoots an unwelcome hunter just because he wandered past a no trespassing sign is probably in trouble.

There was a famous case a few years back in the midwest where an unoccupied rural residence was robbed several times. The owner allegedly rigged a shotgun to fire when the door was opened.

An invader was subsequently injured and sued the property owner.

In that case, the courts ruled in favor of the injured party even though he was in the act of committing a crime because of the unnecessary force involved. It was the court's judgment that the intruder was not harming a person, and therefore deadly force was not justifiable.

More and more farmers seem to be posting their property as a means of discouraging trespassers and avoiding some of the problems brought on by unwelcome guests That may mean some of the neighborliness has left rural America as farmers get larger and more businesslike.

On the other hand, there are still plenty of farm people who like company, who welcome visitors and who don't mind someone hunting on their property with proper permission Rural America isn't closed to city folks It's just that farmers are being a little more careful about who is welcomed and who isn't.

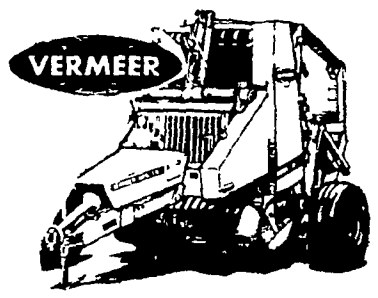
FARMERS

YOU BE THE JUDGE

The giant round baler represents the fastest, most efficient method of harvesting hay in the field today. Why? Because it's a one-man system. Lets you harvest, transport and feed more hay per day from your tractor seat than a whole crew of workers with conventional equipment.



- Bales a tight weather resistent hay package.
- Bale up to 18 tons per hour by yourself!

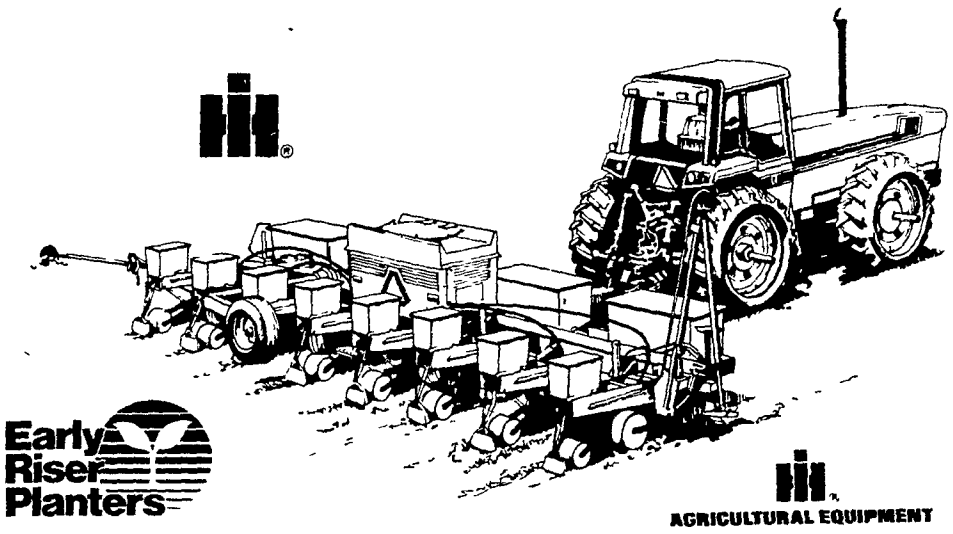
The Early Riser Planter.



Early Riser Planters

AGRICULTURAL EQUIPMENT

Excellent seed to soil contact even in no-till conditions.

Make the most of any kind of soil condition with an IH 800 Series Early Riser Planter And get your crops off to a better start

In many soils, you can do your planting in just one pass Without tilling! The reason is the newly designed staggered double disk opener, so narrow that it moves less soil and penetrates more easily than any other planter Up to 600 lbs of down pressure per row can be applied, eliminating the need for special coulters in most soil conditions

The result is a narrower furrow that retains more moist soil along the sides Ground hugging twin covering disks positively cover the furrow, trapping each seed in an air-tight pocket of moist soil Ideal seed to soil contact for fast germination and uniform emergence

The Early Riser Planter can handle tough ground, too. Under extremely tough soil conditions, a new no-till rippled coulter can be added to break ground ahead of the double disk openers on trailing planters When minimum tillage is desired the 9¼" disk furrowing attachment moves through trash and clods to help keep seed depth—and germination—more uniform Naturally the Early Riser Planter also works superbly with conventional tillage

Get the Red Edge at your IH Dealer today. Let him show you how the new Early Riser Planter can give you better seed to soil contact for early rising crops

This Husqvarna is the work of one design engineer.

He spends a lot of time engineering it And a lot more time out in the woods working with the prototype He may decide it needs to go back to the drawing board

When he's satisfied himself—he's satisfied the toughest critic he has

That's why the Husqvarna chain saw you buy will exceed your expectations Because it's not created by the compromise of a committee it's built on the integrity of one man

THIS FARM FAMILY CHOSE THE SLURRY-BRUTE MANURE PUMP AND TANKER COMBINATION FOR SIMPLICITY

When Irvin Zimmerman and family decides on new farm equipment for their farm at Walnuttown, PA off Route 222 East of Reading, they look for tough, rugged machines that get the job done — with simplicity. That's why after an on-the-farm demonstration last week, the Zimmerman's decided on the Slurry-Brute lagoon pump and the model tanker from US Farm Systems of Pennsylvania. They found this equipment to handle the manure solids build-up from their 65 milk cows.

"We really like the hydraulics," Irvin said. "The ease of getting the pump into the lagoon is really good. And since we had so much heavy stuff all over the 8' deep lagoon and many foreign objects thrown in by neighborhood youths, we are pleased with the performance of the heavy-duty propeller and the shear-bar knife to help cut and stir the materials in the lagoon. And the pump has strong pumping ability."

If you too look for tough, rugged machines that get the job done on your farm — with simplicity, choose the Slurry-Brute manure pump and tanker. We are working the equipment somewhere in Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, Virginia, Delaware or New York almost daily now. For help to determine the model, size and price to fit your specific farm needs and to see it work in your area, write or call: US Farm Systems of Pennsylvania, 4020 Blue Ball Road, Nottingham, PA Phone: 301-398-2948

THE TANKER

The tanker has a very simple unloading system. A fan on the bottom front draws in the manure by gravity and blows the slurry through a pipe up over the tank to broadcast the heavy liquid out the back. A special baffle deflects the slurry into a nice spreading pattern onto the fields. "We think the few moving parts on this tanker with no shaft or auger in the bottom to accumulate strings and other foreign objects will prove to be easy to maintain." Zimmerman said.

The phone rings constantly in the office of Les Houck, owner and farm director for Agri-broadcasting Network in New Holland. Houck cheerfully answers and keeps up-to-date on information which affects his daily programming of market prices.

Faye Houck is chief bookkeeper, business manager and jack-of-all trades. Here she works at the typewriter in the sunny offices of Agri-broadcasting.

Broadcasting network focuses on farmers

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

Should you sell your hay? Is this a good week to take those hogs to market? Are the corn prices up or down? Perhaps you've had the experience of being asked to jot down the latest market prices when they are broadcast by radio so your farm family can make some important economic decision.

If you have, chances are good that you may have gotten those prices from the Agri-broadcasting Network located in New Holland.

Les Houck, owner and farm director of Agri-broadcasting, explains that his network provides up-to-the minute market prices for established radio stations. He says, "We serve as farm broadcasters. Stations can't afford to hire someone to do that program, so we supply farm information."

The reports from Agri-broadcasting are primarily pricing because, as Houck explains, "We feel the farmer would like to know prices above everything else. Our main emphasis is on the Chicago Broad prices, livestock prices, cash grain prices with local prices in southeastern Pennsylvania, the Delmarva area and Maryland. Out of these markets he can draw a basis of the domestic need and the export need for grain."

Houck adds, "We are not a news network, so we have no need to report the news. We are all prices. Some farm networks are all editorial. But I like to know what the prices are and I get the feeling that farmers like to know what prices are."

The one exception Houck makes to the strictly price format is trying to provide background information on why prices are up or down, "to put things in perspective."

He stresses that while he is performing a service that no one else is providing to local stations, all the information he has is also available to them. It is a matter, of course, of their willingness to prepare farm broadcasts and to gather the information. "We can gather for all stations, and the cost per station is lower," he adds.

For that matter, Houck makes it clear that the information which he uses is also readily available to individual farmers. However, he points out, "He can make the phone calls, but he doesn't."

Houck feels the radio is an important tool for farmers, saying, "Radio is a companion - you take it with you. This time of the year farmers can keep track of prices as they listen to the radio in the tractor cabs or as they grade eggs."

But farmers are not the only listeners. Houck states, "Many people not connected to farming say they like to listen to my reports because we move through so many items so fast. Because of the length of the programs we can't take long, drawn-out events."

Most of the reports from Agri-broadcasting are three minutes in length, with a few shorter and some longer. The reports are carried basically at two times during the day: early (very early) morning and noon. He says, "Our early morning program is a summary of the day before - it is old news." About 10:30 the office gears up for the noon reports and then later in the afternoon they record updates on those programs.

There are several basic reports Houck makes each day, including a dairy report, livestock, livestock and grain, grain and strictly cash grain. These reports are updates throughout the day and are regionalized to some extent so that those being aired in the Delmarva area, for instance, carry prices local to that area.

Houck says, "We do about 15 different programs. We may do the same one over and change the cash grain prices." Ninety percent of the broadcasts are recorded by Houck, with Associate Farm Director Ken Brubaker preparing and reporting when he, Houck, is unavailable. There are five employees working at Agri-broadcasting.

All reports are recorded in the New Holland studio on cassette tapes and sent via telephone to the participating stations. When Houck began with the network in 1976 there were nine stations accepting his broadcasts. That number has risen to 39, covering the entire state of Pennsylvania, parts of Maryland and New Jersey.

Ideally, Houck likes to have just one station in an area carry his broadcasts and he adds, "We are trying to hold expansion because I feel we could be doing a better job on some of the programming. We always strive for better quality." He mentions that broadcasts are most widely accepted in areas where there are lots of farmers. He contrasts conditions in the east with those in the midwest where whole cities revolve around the farm.

"Here," he states, "We're pushed because so many other things take precedence over agriculture."

As he sits in his Main Street, New Holland, office, he looks out and comments that New Holland is an example of a town where the importance of agriculture can be readily seen, with a steady stream of cattle trucks and hay wagons driving through the town. He notes, however, that this is not typical for most towns in this heavily populated part of the state.

Houck feels his location in New Holland is appropriate with the many influential markets close by. He says, "We're fortunate being located here because prices here tend to be representative both for domestic use and export use. Most grain prices are set off what we're reporting."

It is quite evident as the conversation goes on that Les Houck has a very intimate knowledge and understanding of markets, futures, commodities and all those items which go into the pricing of farm products both domestically and for export. Because of this knowledge and what some may consider an inside track, it is not uncommon for him to be asked for advice about buying and selling. While he is always willing to talk, understandably he maintains that he is very reluctant to give advice which can affect a man's financial position. He explains, "What is good for one farmer may be entirely wrong for another, depending upon his feed situation and other factors. We try not to predict - we just tell the situation and let him make up his mind."

How does Houck get the latest in prices? He has a wire service machine, Commodity News Service, Inc., which ticks off the latest information from the Chicago Board of Trade and national livestock prices. He adds, "We make calls. We call local markets and local USDA." He says these places accept their calls for the latest prices and that they cooperate fully.

Asked if he ever gets response from his listeners, Houck replies, "Some tell me they are really dedicated listeners and record the prices daily. It's part of their daily record keeping. A lot of farmers say they have their wives record the price for them."

Houck is very tuned into the business of farming, perhaps because he grew up on a dairy farm in Paradise and continues to love the land. He says, "It is the greatest feeling in the world to be plowing and planting." With his love of farming, it is no surprise that he enjoys keeping close contacts with farmers.

He says, "I go to the local markets to see farmers and to hear the auctioneers work." He also does some public speaking, explaining, "I like to talk to farm groups about grain. I strive to get to know farmers."

Although Houck's name is recognized fairly easily in a group of farmers, he is not instantly recognized in person, something which is alright with him because he enjoys the anonymity of visiting with farmers just for the joy of it.

Another way he likes to meet the

(Turn to Page C4)

Using the latest in technology, Houck talks into the microphone recording his reports on cassettes which are played through the telephone for participating stations. He makes up to 15 programs daily, updating and changing as needed to reflect the latest in the markets.

Broadcast for farmers

public is through remote broadcasts, of which he does about 25-30 per year, including reports from such places as Farm Show, Ag Progress Days and events like the Pork Congress He also attends many meetings simply as background for him in his work

He says, "I enjoy being where the farmers are, but it is more convenient to do our programs here." When he goes on location, his trusty wire service machine goes along and is usually a great attention getter because farmer enjoy seeing the prices roll out the machine.

There is one other aspect to the Network in addition to price reports there is commercial air time. Les explains that the news programming is offered free to radio stations which trade air time for advertising. Houck states, "We're only as good as our advertisers" Brubaker makes the local advertising contacts and there are national advertising representatives for that trade Simply put, it is the paid advertising that supports the network. Commercial spots are mailed to the stations and played on tape.

Houck recalls that he became involved in his present occupation as a result of being active in the National Tractor Pullers Association, of which he is currently serving as president. In his previous job with C.B. Hoober, Intercourse, he got interested in pulling and had his own tractor. During his work with the pulls, he met Ed Johnson who had started a farm broadcasting network in Pennsylvania, but was broadcasting from his own facilities in Ohio. The situation was not working becaue of the distance, so Houck made the decision to take over. Since then, the station has grown continually.

Houck compares his going into radio broadcasting with going into farming, with some of the same pitfalls and investment problems But he adds, "I was fortunate. I just went in and hoped to get ahead"

Although he had no broadcasting training, he says, "My voice comes out very well And engineers at stations can do wonders - that's the secret"

He said phone lines allow good quality tapes with the quality recorders available

How is the competition in the farm broadcasting business? Houck answers with a smile, "Every radio station is our competition Every one could do it. I wish there were more competition so we would have more farm programming. But the only way for that to happen is for farmers to call up and say they want it. Mostly the farm population is a silent population." The interest is there, he points out, adding "If there is more expansion and more emphasis it would help our business."

When Houck sits down to the microphone, he assembles the latest news from the wire service and from forms filled out by phone calls, then proceeds to read. There is no writing out the report before he gives it; it just flows. However, he acknowledges, "You always do some dumb things. You get into the flow, and have to be able to read with your mouth saying one thing and thinking ahead."

The service Houck and his Network provides is one which fills a need for farmers everywhere - keeping them in touch with prices of commodities which affect their planning and decision-making. For Houck, providing this service not only keeps him in close contact with the farming community which is so close to his heart, but also helps him contribue to keeping farms strong.

Rural areas are growing

LANCASTER — Rolling hills, acres of farmland and clean air were once the portrait of rural America. But that picture is changing.

For the first time since 1820, rural and small communities are growing at a faster rate than the nation's cities, according to the U.S. Census. Accompanying the trend is concern over how to plan for growth while fostering conservation.

"There is a concern today with losing land once used for agriculture," according to Richard M. Thomas, professor of community development and higher education at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Much of the nation's pristine land is becoming urbanized added Thomas, who lectured at four community development workshops across the nation last month sponsored by the Future Farmers of America.

"Urbanization is not all bad, but some of the bad aspects — such as pollution and congestion — are cropping up in formerly unspoiled places."

Although agriculture is the nation's largest industry, one million acres of farmland is lost each year to urban and other uses, reports the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Nearly 100 agriculture professors attended the workshops, designed to teach community development methods as used in the FFA's program, Building Our American Communities.

BOAC, sponsored by R.J. Reynolds Industries, Inc., seeks to identify and solve community needs while building youth leadership.

"Community development projects in the BOAC program address an emerging national issue of how to manage growth and development while protecting our natural resources," said J. Paul Sticht, chairman and chief executive officer of R.J. Reynolds Industries, Inc., a company with substantial interests in agriculture through its tobacco and foods businesses.

"Based on current trends, community development in small and rural communities will become even more important," Sticht said.

Each year, thousands of FFA members, mostly high school students, conduct BOAC projects, such as FFA members in Franklin, La., when they constructed a classroom the local school board couldn't afford; or when FFA members in Elma, Wash., developed a reforestation project, investing in that area's largest industry.

Remarked Ted Amick, the FFA's BOAC program specialist, "Farming today rarely offers the independent lifestyle it once did. Today, the farmer is an agribusinessman who must work in a complex environment with shrinking resources to be successful – or even to survive."

Thomas said planning can help rural areas achieve some of the best parts of urban living while maintaining the best of rural life. Industry, for example, may be the key to a community's survival. "But what matters is the kind of industry that gets in. So often, except for creating new jobs, a bad industry actually drains off community dollars in resources, while the land becomes spoiled."

Still, added Lee Cary, another workshop instructor, the issues are not impossible to face. "There are things people can do."

Cary, professor of regional and community affairs at the University of Missouri, said, "Most national or state decisions are implemented at the local level, where there is a possibility of influencing implementation. In addition, it is at the local level where national policy is tested out, where word begins to go back up the ladder as to how a policy works or doesn't work.

"Farm problems do not occur in isolation," Cary said. "They eventually affect the national community."

The key, he said, "is to get organized."

Try delicious honey

Honey, an unrefined and delicately flavored food, is unique in that it is the only natural unmanufactured sweet available in large quantities.

Statistics report it takes approximately 560 worker bees flying one and one-third times the distance around the world to produce one pound of honey.

In its pure state, honey needs no preservatives. It keeps best in a tightly covered container stored in a cool, dark place.

Come to the Quilt Show

BOYERTOWN — While most people are preparing their gardens and dusting off their lawn chairs, members of the Boyertown Area Historical Society will once again be putting many hours of work into one of their most important projects, their annual Quilt Show.

This will be the seventh year for the show slated for Saturday, May 2, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday, May 3, noon to 6 p.m. The event will be staged in the Society building, 43 South Chestnut Street, Boyertown.

The show which features over 100 quilts, has attracted hundreds of visitors. Some come to see the nineteenth century patchwork and applique examples. Active quilters come to see these and other modern, newly-created designs.

For beginners, society members will be busy stitching and happy to give advice to interested onlookers.

The quilts, old and new, are on loan from private individuals and, in most cases, have not been seen by the public prior to this show

As a special attraction, single and double-woven, and Jacquard coverlets will be on display. The examples on view will be products of the nineteenth century, most of which were created by southeastern Pennsylvania craftsmen.

In the 1800's, coverlets were made by men who were professional weavers, and the Jacquard coverlets were often embellished with the weaver's name, the recipient's name, and the year it was woven.

Artifacts pertaining to weaving will be on display, and Mrs. Ada Stauffer, a local weaver, will be demonstrating the basics of the craft on a small loom.

Also on exhibit will be a quilt just recently completed by Society members The design, "Wishing Well," is an unusual variation of the traditional nine patch, utilizing only two different fabrics. The effect of the design is an intricate maize, which embodies a somewhat Oriental feeling. Mrs Rosie Mutter, quilt show chairman, selected the design, and society quilters helped to sew the top and then quilted it.

Open to the public, there is a donation of $1.00 for adults, children under 16 admitted free if accompanied by an adult.

Last year's show attracted people from all corners of southeastern Pennsylvania and several adjoining states.

Lancaster Co. Society 7

Farm women 7 held their April meeting at the home of Esther Hoffer, Lancaster.

Roll call was answered by member's comments about their last Easter hat.

The program was presented by Rebecca Buckwalter who spoke on herbs

The next meeting will be held Friday, May 15 at 7 p.m. at the home of Miriam Keneagy, Leacock Road of Paradise. This will be a crafts, plants and food sale.

It's a honey of a food

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

LITITZ — One of the most confusing and yet tempting foods on grocery shelves seems to be delectable, delicious honey.

To those who have used it, it becomes a regular addition to favorite recipes. For those who haven't, the food "sounds" like it would be good.

Because a lot of foods require honey, they are often cast aside in search of another recipe because the cook doesn't understand honey or doesn't have it readily available on his or her shelf.

So, to make honey another cooking conquest for you, here is, please pardon the praise, everything you've ever wanted to know about honey, but just didn't bother to ask.

Perhaps the best hint in working with honey is to remember that it absorbs and retains moisture. Thus honey keeps baked products fresh longer. But this also means that uncovered, honey will lose flavor and aroma because it absorbs moisture.

Other suggestions come from the Pennsylvania State Beekeepers Association:

Honey is a natural, unrefined food. It is safe and wholesome, since bacteria cannot live in honey. Honey is available in a variety of forms; liquid, comb, chunk, cut comb, solid (sometimes called granulated or finely crystallized), and creamed (a finely crystallized honey of creamy consistency).

When buying honey: The color and flavor of honey depend on the flowers from which bees gather the nectar. It comes in a wide range of colors, from crystal white through several shades of amber. The flavor, too, depends on the kind of flowers from which bees gather the nectar. Flavors range from the "lightness" of clover to the "sharpness" of buckwheat.

To store honey: Keep liquid honey in a cool dry place. Avoid damp storage places because honey can absorb and retain moisture. Do not refrigerate; this hastens granulation. While freezing does not injure color or flavor, it may hasten granulation.

Honey is a quick energy food because it is composed of simple sugars, dextrose and levulose, that doesn't require digestion by the human body. For this reason, it is often used as a quick energy source by athletes and sportsmen.

In a cake or cookie recipe that calls for other sweetening, the general rule is to reduce the amount of liquid one-quarter cup for each cup of honey used. Honey may be substituted for sugar cup-for-cup. When honey is substituted in baked goods, add 1/2 teaspoon baking soda to the recipe for each cup of honey used, and bake at a lower temperature. When using a recipe formulated for honey, no such changes are necessary.

So try honey in your next recipe for a honey of a meal. Some more easy honey recipes are:

HONEY ICE CUBES

These cubes go great in iced tea or punch.

1/2 c. honey
2 c. very hot water
2 T. lemon juice
Freeze

HONEY BAKED CHICKEN

1 to 3 pound frying chicken
1 cup catsup
1/2 c. honey
1 lemon, sliced

Combine catsup and honey and pour over chicken in a shallow baking pan. Arrange lemon slices over chicken and bake at 325 degrees for one hour or until tender. Try this same recipe with ribs!

HONEY ICE CREAM SUNDAE

Pour a generous stream of honey over a serving of ice cream, usually vanilla or chocolate. Sprinkle nuts on top.

MARINADE FOR HAM

1 c. catsup
1/4 c. light flavored honey
1/4 c. prepared mustard

Stir together and baste ham during last 30 minutes of baking.

CHORE-TIME

The Air System With A Mind Of Its Own

Until now, most ventilation systems had one drawback. Air inlets had to be opened and closed by hand.

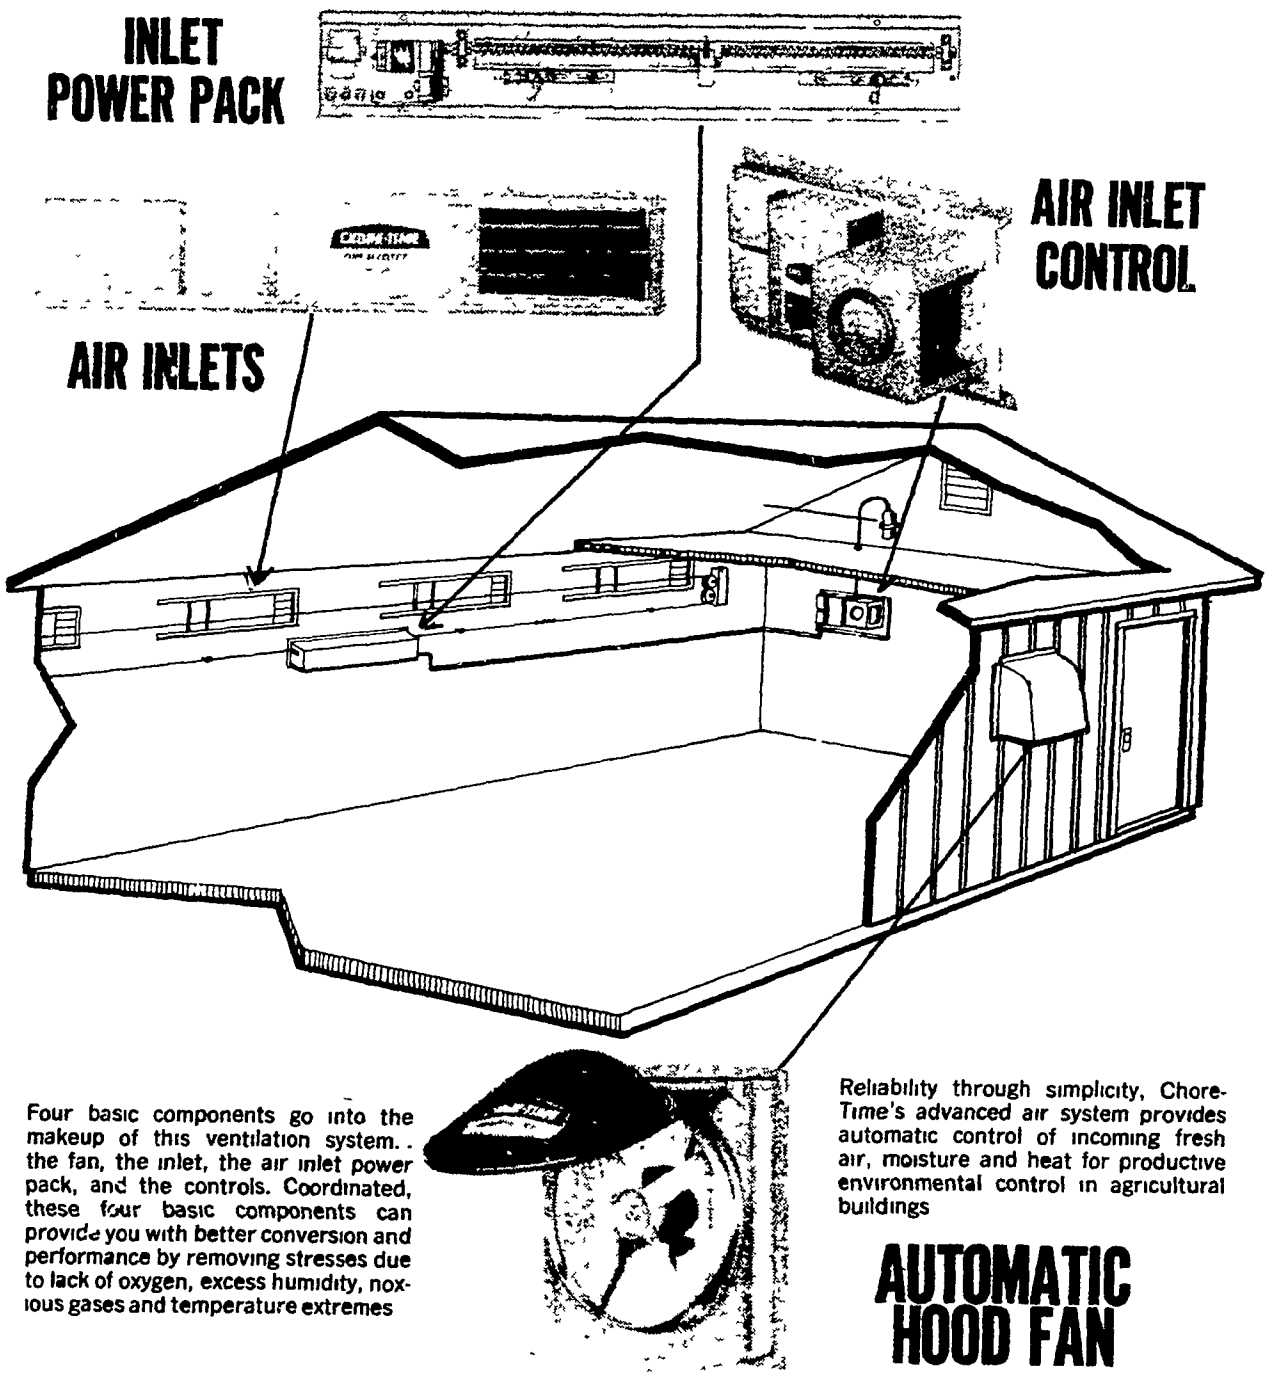
This was time consuming — and pretty much a matter of guesswork.

Now, Chore-Time has eliminated this problem.

The Chore-Time system has a mind of its own and adjusts inlets — in conjunction with fan operation — to maintain air pressure at a constant, preset level.

This provides a degree of air and moisture accuracy never before possible in poultry and livestock buildings.

The new inlet control (pictured) is just one of many exclusive features that make Chore-Time air systems number one in performance and reliability.



Four basic components go into the makeup of this ventilation system.. the fan, the inlet, the air inlet power pack, and the controls. Coordinated, these four basic components can provide you with better conversion and performance by removing stresses due to lack of oxygen, excess humidity, noxious gases and temperature extremes

Reliability through simplicity, Chore-Time's advanced air system provides automatic control of incoming fresh air, moisture and heat for productive environmental control in agricultural buildings

Queen Becky loves honey

Rebecca S. Fisher
Honey Queen

LITITZ — Pennsylvania's Honey Queen is Rebecca S. Fisher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merle P. Fisher of Granville.

Becky's favorite honey recipe is Oatmeal Buttermilk Pancake, included here.

Becky is a graduate of Lewistown Area High School and has been involved in both 4-H and the Granville United Methodist Church for some time.

This honey queen has helped her father and brothers in beekeeping operations and continues to do so whenever she isn't busy promoting bees, beekeeping, and honey as Honey Queen throughout the state.

Becky, who now attends Millersville State College, appears throughout the state at fairs, parades and festivals, speaks at dinners and civic groups and has appeared on radio and television programs.

As state queen, Becky had the opportunity to represent Pennsylvania and the Pennsylvania Beekeeper's Association at the American Beekeeping Federation Convention in Seattle, Washington in January.

She competed with 12 other queens from around the country, and was chosen second runner-up. Becky was chosen for her knowledge of bees and honey as well as her appearance, personality and participation.

Becky relates one unique experience which happened during the trip in Seattle. On Wednesday of that week the queens took a boat ride to Tillicum Island where they viewed traditional Indian dances and ate baked salmon. The boat ride was an hour each way, so a Dixie-land band provided entertainment on the boat. On the return trip the band played requests at which time Becky asked if they knew a song form Pennsylvania. They played "The Pennsylvania Polka."

Ladies Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas

Lancaster Extension Home Economist

CHANGES NEEDED IN CHILDREN'S SNACK HABITS

Toddlers and preschoolers have appetites to match their sizes and most of them do best if they have between meal snacks to be sure they get the nutrients they need. In fact, morning and afternoon snacks are an institution in most homes with young children.

But a recent study showed that most of the snacks they eat provide little nutrition and lots of sugar which is a major cause of dental cavities. The study found that soft drinks (usually uncarbonated) were the most frequent morning snack for this age group, closely followed by cookies and other bakery products. The most frequent afternoon snack was carbonated beverages (a reversal from the morning) again followed by cookies and baked goods.

Soft drinks are high in sugar, as are baked goods, and the baked goods stick to the teeth, further increasing the risk of cavities. Equally important, the children get filled up on foods that have little to offer but calories and often have little appetite for the foods that have the nutrients they need.

What's the answer? Fruit juices or milk could replace the soft drinks at snack time. If plain milk isn't an acceptable snack time treat, try adding a little chocolate syrup or other flavoring. You can offer easy to handle carrot or celery sticks or cubes of mild cheese. Fruit is a good choice too, as are small apples, oranges or other fruit. They are a better size for little hands and plenty big enough for little appetites.

Children need well-balanced diets for healthy growth and development and nutritious snacks should be part of those diets.

HOW TO BUY AND CARE FOR SILK

Silk and silk blended fabrics and garments appear in all price ranges today. Low-priced ($19-$25) silk blouses are now available to the general public through several major mail-order retailers and many of the new spring fabrics contain between 5 and 35% silk fibers. Small percentages of silk in a fiber blend enhance color, create surface interest and improve the fabrics' hand.

Here are some guidelines to consider when purchasing and caring for silk or silk blend fabrics.

A nubby surface effect (slubs) in silk is to be expected and is usually desireable. Slubs are not considered flaws in silk fabric.

Check the stability of the fabric. Threads should resist slipping and twisting. If the fabric feels too stiff, it could have too much sizing and might lose its' hand during cleaning.

All silks can be dry cleaned but hand-washing washable silks in warm water has certain advantages. (A "dry-clean only" garment cannot be handwashed.) The fabric has a natural sizing (a gift from the silk worm) and actually has a better hand after washing. Generally, only light, solid colored silks are recommended for handwashing because colors will run. Do not wash irridescents, silk chiffons, satins or crepes.

Wash washable silk like you wash your hair. Don't bleach or use detergents – mild soap or shampoo is best. Use lukewarm water, not hot, and drip dry until slightly damp, out of direct sunlight. Do not wring the fabric or garment. Press on the wrong side with a dry iron set on or below the synthetic range.

Water spots and surface shine can be removed by drycleaning. Perspiration and deodorant stains are a problem with silk because they are not removeable. Small shields, purchased or made, can help prevent damage.

Join the beef cook-off contest

HARRISBURG — Pull out those fantastic beef recipes conjured up over the winter months, because it's beef cook-off time!

The sixth annual Pennsylvania Beef Cook-Off Contest will be held at Trinity High School in Shiremanstown on June 26, according to State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell. Competition is open to all residents of Pennsylvania, 18 years or older, who do not have professional cooking status.

"This is an excellent opportunity for Pennsylvanians to show off their original recipes and be rewarded for their creativity," Hallowell said.

Entries must be submitted by May 15, 1981. Finalists, selected by a panel of judges, will compete on June 26. Contestants for the final competition will be selected on the bases of originality, 20 points; taste, 40 points; ease of preparation and practicality, 20 points; and appearance, 20 points.

Six finalists will be selected to prepare their entries from the recipes submitted. First prize is $125, second prize, $60, third and fourth prizes, $30 each. The state winner will be eligible to compete in the national cook-off contest to be held in September in Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Each contestant may submit one original beef recipe using beef chuck, round, rump, fresh brisket cut in any form or ground beef. The dish must contain a minimum of two and not more than five pounds of beef. The meat must be exclusively beef and can only be from the above cuts.

Total cooking times may not exceed four hours, not including preliminary preparations, such as marinating. Recipes must be specific, but brand names and commercial tenderizers are not allowed. The number of servings and preparation time should be included in recipe entries.

If you are interested in entering the Pennsylvania Beef Cook-Off Contest, send your beef recipe, typed in triplicate with your name, address, phone number and brief biography to: Mrs. Mary Wilson, Chairman, Pennsylvania Beef Cook-off, 862 Webster Drive, State College, PA 16801; phone, 814-238-5888. Entries must be submitted by May 15.

Kids, have you ever heard of tacos? Have you ever eaten them? Now's your chance.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Proud/That's how I felt

Proud. And awed. And patriotic. And thankful to the Lord above for setting those two courageous astronauts and their marvelous space shuttle down smack in the middle of an ancient lake bed as America triumphed in making space history.

And fascinated. Fascinated because, according to reports, that shuttle could have landed on that desert without Young or Crippen lifting so much as a little finger, if it had been necessary.

A computer could have done it all.

I personally find it mind-boggling that a spaghetti-like mass, compounded of thread-thin wires and microchips, can be so unbelievably smart and instantly responsive.

But such built-in homing devices, which can bring a massive space machine hurtling back to earth right on a dime, aren't all that new when you think about it.

Mother Nature built them in pigeons aeons ago.

And we've all read these stories of lost cats and dogs that found their way across thousands of miles to their masters.

But few people know that cows have the most sharply-honed homing devices ever designed.

These "cowputers" are buried deep in the mental mechanics of every dairy cow. They're seldom used for such mundane activities as finding the right stall or the correct gate, but rather saved for special occasions.

Dorie, for instance, used hers just last week. The farmer had taken her baby to the calf pen, so Dorie slipped her stall barn seat belt to fly off seeking a reunion with her daughter.

With a hundred acres of greening alfalfa and lush oats and barley in which to land, Dorie's cowputer zoomed her from orbit into the set-down zone programmed into every dairy cow that ever lived.

The farm wife's vegetable garden.

While landing, she crashed through the carrots, riddled the radishes and pock-marked the potato patch.

Why Mother Nature couldn't be satisfied with giving a cow four stomachs and that neat milking equipment, and left out the cowputer, I guess will remain one of the great mysteries of the universe.

I'll ponder that while I go repair the cowputer craters.

Heat, drouth aid hybrid development

LITITZ — Last summer was a "Killer." Heat and drouth took its toll on crops from the Rockies to the Atlantic. But such conditions can be an advantage for plant breeders looking for tolerance to these stresses.

For example, corn hybrids with improved drouth tolerance are available as a result of intensive research conducted in dry growing conditions the past few years.

"One of the more important plant characteristics for drouth tolerance is a large, fibrous root system," says Ken Wrede, manager of Funk Seeds International's Seward, Nebraska research station.

"A well-developed root system is less likely to be affected by drouth since there are more roots to pull water from the ground," he explains. "This particular characteristic also allows for more efficient nutrient uptake.

"Sturdy brace roots to hold the plant up are essential as well," Wrede adds. "Root lodging is possible if the plant fails to develop a strong brace root system."

In addition to a well-developed root system, hybrids must show minimal leaf scorch, even when grown under the most severe environmental conditions.

"We choose as parents those inbreds which tassel and silk at the same time to assure optimal conditions at pollination," says Wrede.

Another desirable trait is a larger ear size, or, if possible, double ears. This helps boost yields even if weather stress requires reduced planting populations, Dr. Wrede says.

Also, cold tolerant hybrids will play a key role in the fight against moisture stress. Corn planted early tassels sooner and generally beats the heat that can reduce seed set.

Researchers are now breeding hybrids with superior ability to germinate and grow under cold stress.

"In the future, we hope to push planting dates in Nebraska up to mid-April where possible," Wrede says. Other stress-fighting characteristics breeders look for under poor weather conditions are resistances to disease and insect infestations.

Wrede points out that moisture demand by corn is most crucial starting a week or two before and continuing through the pollination period. In fact, 70 percent of the corn's total water requirement is consumed during reproduction.

"Generally, even if there is moisture stress at the pollination stage, the tassels will emerge and shed pollen," he explains. "But there are cases when severe heat combines with dry winds to kill the pollen. High temperatures and low humidty can also reduce the receptiveness of the silk."

Although recent heat and dry spells have had an adverse impact on crop production, researchers find they can use those conditions to their advantage, for breeding the new tough, high-performance hybrids that are needed to give consistently high yields under a wide range of growing conditions.

Switch fertilizer tanks
to a Calumet vacuum tank with soil injector

Liquid hog manure can save thousands of dollars in commercial fertilizer costs. So it makes sense to preserve that value with good management.

That's why Calumet recommends pairing our vacuum tank with a 2 or 4-shank Calumet soil injector. Soil plow down retains about four times the nitrogen lost with surface spreading, plus reduces odor and runoff.

Stop in to see the full line of Calumet vacuum tanks — in capacities from 1180 to 4500 gallons and choice of two vacuum pumps. And ask about the benefits of using a Calumet 2 or 4-shank soil injector.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

April is the best month to hunt for wild flowers. They bloom in the early spring before the overhead leaves become too dense

So this morning I started through the fields to some woodland even though the temperature was in the 30's and there was a brisk wind blowing I was thinking about the cold weather when a rabbit surprised me by hopping away toward the nearby bushes.

Soon I saw some Dutchman's Breeches, Dogtooth Violets and a few Bloodroots peeping through the leaves. Then I came to an area of meadow where thousands of bluebottles with various shades of blue, pink and lavender flowers were blooming and I picked a few to replace the dried marigold arrangement on the dining room table

I noticed that the upper meadow fence will need a lot of repair before the heifers can be pastured there Not only have people climbed over it but at one place a neighbor cut down a white birch and threw it into our meadow and tore the fence in the process.

It was a cold but sunny day and noisey wild ducks and geese were on the river. There were groundhogs and their holes were in evidence everywhere. Some new sink holes have opened in the old corn field and will have to be filled The trees were pushing yellow-green leaves and flickers, mourning doves and cardinals were flying about in them. There were so many rabbits that I think they were having a convention

A long walk like this is supposed to help one lose a few ounces but that is only true if you don't get hungry and come home and eat something. Sorry to say, I couldn't resist the desire for an apple from our fruit bowl.

Check your diet

LITITZ — Did you ever think of your diet as a jigsaw puzzle? The pieces, adequate amount of edibles from the basic four food groups, must all fit together within the border, that limited amount of calories you can eat without gaining weight. Puzzle pieces in disarray mean you aren't getting enough nutrients of you are gaining excess pounds.

For more than half of the U.S. population, the puzzle pieces aren't snapping into place. According to information presented at the 1981 Agricultural Outlook Conference in Washington, D.C., the average American woman is eating 1,520 calories a day. This is nearly 25 per cent less than the 2,000 calories she needs for adequate nutrition. How can she get the nutrients she needs without gaining weight?

This problem has sparked interest in a fairly new concept — nutrient density. Nutrient defense foods are those with a high ratio of nutrients per serving to the calories for that same serving. Broccoli and citrus fruits are good examples. So is broiled chicken. But if you dip the chicken in batter and deep fat fry it, that piece of chicken is no longer considered to be anywhere near as dense in nutrients.

The nutrients are still there, but the calorie count has jumped. Remember, it is the nutrients per calorie, not just nutrients that makes a food nutrient dense.

Consumers, especially women need to become aware of this concept and include nutrient dense foods from each of the four food groups in their daily diets.

Food in the new fifth food group, mostly high in fat, sugar or alcohol, have a very low nutrient density. They should be avoided as much as possible by that half of the American population who now can't get the nutrients their bodies need without gaining weight.

Join the Honey Producer's

LITITZ — If you've enjoyed the honey recipes and are thinking about honey production, join the Lancaster County Honey Producer's Association on Monday, May 4 at Kauffman's Fruits Orchard.

The orchard is located 2 miles east of Bird-In-Hand along 340. Hives will be opened promptly at 6:30 p.m. A business meeting will follow.

All interested persons are invited to attend.

Learn by doing

LITITZ -- When you heard the word 4-H you usually hear the word "project" too. The project, a way to learn by doing, is basic to all 4-H clubs.

Projects are units of learning that focus on a single subject with definite goals in mind. They are informal - 4-H isn't school - but help and supervision are always available from adult and teen leaders.

There is a 4-H project area to interest almost everyone - from energy to animal science, from crafts to communications. Each project area has a variety of specific projects to choose from. In fact, in Pennsylvania today, more than 100,000 boys and girls are enrolled in over 100 different projects.

What do boys and girls get out of working on and completing a 4-H project? A little healthy competition, a lot of persistence, responsibility, and greater knowledge in their project area are just a few pluses.

Some projects, those that involve animals for example, can take a year or more to complete. Others grow or get more complicated each year to keep the 4-H'er challenged. The eight-year-old who learns how to operate a sewing machine and make a log carrier may be the eighteen-year-old who models a carefully tailored suit in the state fashion revue.

Youth grow with 4-H because 4-H grows with youth.

4-H'ers attend national conference

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Charlene Gormley, 18, Newtown represented Pennsylvania as one of 4 outstanding 4-H members who attended the National 4-H Conference in Washington, D.C., recently.

Other 4-H participants were: Diane Krause, of R3, Slatington; Brian Robinson, of R1, Rochester; and William Hosler, of R2, Port Royal.

"The four were named to attend the event on the basis of their 4-H records and participation in county and state activities," points out Dr. William Lindley, youth program specialist at The Pennsylvania State University.

The conference, with headquarters at the National 4-H Center, was designed to provide meaningful involvement among youth, volunteers, and professional staff in 4-H youth program development at the national level and to strengthen 4-H public relations efforts and reporting to the public.

The delegates had an opportunity to concentrate their efforts in consulting groups stressing programs of national concern to youth and sharing examples of innovative 4-H programs.

A special highlight for the Pennsylvania delegation was a special session with area federal lawmakers.

Several hundred 4-H members from all states, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia took part in the activities.

Charlene, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gormley, has been a 4-H member for seven years. She is a student of Shippensburg State College.

A member of the Wrightstown 4-H club, she served as secretary, treasurer, song leader, and teen leader.

Account book available

UNIVERSITY PARK — "Complete and systematic record keeping is vital to profitable farming," says Frederick A. Hughes, professor of farm management Extension.

Records adequate to file income tax reports and make social security deductions aren't enough, he said..

Hughes, author of Penn State's Farmer's Account Book, explains facts needed to make intelligent decisions regarding the management of a farm business. The book, available as a correspondence course, includes plans for expanding or cutting back enterprises, loan applications in emergencies, and gives answers to the question of continuing in business.

Although approximately 70 percent of all taxpayers require help today in completing their tax forms, a good set of records assures you of a proper return and a savings for tax consultant's services. The Farmer's Account Book covers a full year's business on a farm, including the cash account, expense records, closing inventory, farm business summary, filing an income tax return, and analyzing the farm business.

To secure a copy of this course, send $5.25, plus $1.00 handling, to Account Book, Box 5000, University Park, PA. 16802. Make check payable to Penn State.

Course gives lawn tips

UNIVERSITY PARK — Homeowners dream about a dense green carpet of grass. That dream may come true if you follow Penn State's correspondence course on Home Lawns. This 10-lesson reference course details how to establish, fertilize, and maintain turn on home lawns.

The author discusses initial planning, provision for drainage and irrigation, and the characteristics of the commonly used lawn grasses. Steps in soil preparation are outlined and rates and methods of seeding used for various grasses and mixtures are given.

To order a copy of the course, send a check for $5.50, plus 75 cents handling, to Lawns, Box 5000, University Park, Pa. 16802. Make check payable to Penn State.

Bees keep Howard Brossman 'bzzzzzy'

BY SHEILA MILLER

REHRERSBURG — With the return of spring to northwestern Berks County, the bees on Howard Brossman's farm are keeping 'bzzzzzzy' tapping blossoms and flowers for sweet nectar.

The tenants of Brossman's 17 hives have shaken off winter's weary dormancy and are ready for a summer of honeymaking and baby bee rearing under the watchful eye of their 66-year-old caretaker.

Brossman has been an apiarist since he was 10, when he and his 13-year-old friend Paul Zeigler, from nearby Bethel, acquired their first hive of honeybees.

When he reached the age of 16, Brossman recalled, he went into beekeeping in a bigger way. He purchased 60 hives from a retiring apiarist who lived in Kutztown.

Then the United States Army called him to serve in 1942 and Brossman sold most of his hives to Zeigler, who cared for 15 of his hives while he was away.

Farming became the object of his energies after the war, Brossman said, and he had no time for bees for fifteen years.

"When I finally realized the chicken business didn't pay, I decided to get some hives. I spoke to Paul Zeigler and he asked me if I'd consider a job with the state as a bee inspector," Brossman explained. "I decided to give it a try, and worked for the Department of Agriculture for thirteen years.

"Paul Zeigler and I were the only bee inspectors who worked as a team We were in charge of checking the hives of producers in Chester, Delaware, Bucks, Lebanon, and Schuylkill counties.

"Our inspections started around mid-April and finished up in November. After our regular inspections for the season were finished, we'd travel all over the state, inspecting about 8000 hives for migratory bee keepers. These hives were heading for Florida for the winter to work the blossoms in the fruit orchards there.

"Bees get diseased just like people do. If American Foul Brood, a highly contagious disease, strikes the hive, the bees must be gassed and the honey and hives burned.

"If an out-of-state hive is found to contain American Foul Brood after it arrives in Florida, the hive is burned within 24 hours. That's why we inspect them and certify them disease free."

Brossman explained how the disease destroys all the young larva and eggs in a hive. He said adult bees are not affected by the disease, but all young are killed.

Because of its contagious nature, the disease is controlled by annihilation of infected bees and destruction of hives. Brossman said bees can be fed the drug terramycin to help combat the disease. But, he added, the drug will hide the disease and it will rear its ugly head the minute the drug is stopped.

Brossman said the infected hive's honey is burned because healthy bees may find it and carry contamination back to their hive. The entire insides of the hives are destroyed, also.

The wooden frames on which the bees construct combs and store their honey are burned. However, the supers (wooden 'boxes' containing the frames) can be either boiled in lye water or scorched out with a blow torch.

Brossman recalled how his duties of inspecting called him out in all kinds of weather. Remembering one particular incident, Brossman chuckled:

"One winter Zeigler and I were out in Clearfield County inspecting hives. We were caught in a wet, heavy snow and got soaked through our clothes.

"In winter, bees can't fly quite right. They crawl into your clothing and sting when they're pinched.

"Well, when we finally got back to a motel in State College, we were just about wet. When we took showers that evening, there were hundreds of bees in our clothing and on the floor.

"I wonder what that maid thought the next morning when she found all those bees?"

Since his retirement from the state job, Brossman has gotten back into the bee and honey business on his own farm. He admits he prefers selling bees to customers rather than handling the heavy honey in the fall.

When Brossman first began selling bees, the cost for one super and its residents was $45. Now, he said, the cost has risen to $60 — a bargain considering the materials for a new hive, including supers, frames, bottom board, lid and foundation, is about $100 without bees.

Brossman said he sells a super when he has too many bees. This keeps them from swarming and moving to a new hive in a hollow tree — an insufferable loss for an apiarist.

"I make two hives out of one," he said. "During the day, I remove the bottom super, usually the larger of the two, where most of the bees are working. That super, housing the queen, becomes a new hive.

"Later, as the worker bees return from the field, they return to the remaining super — that way there are enough bees to keep the hive active. They'll raise a queen bee, again — she'll hatch in 14 days and will live for about 3 years,

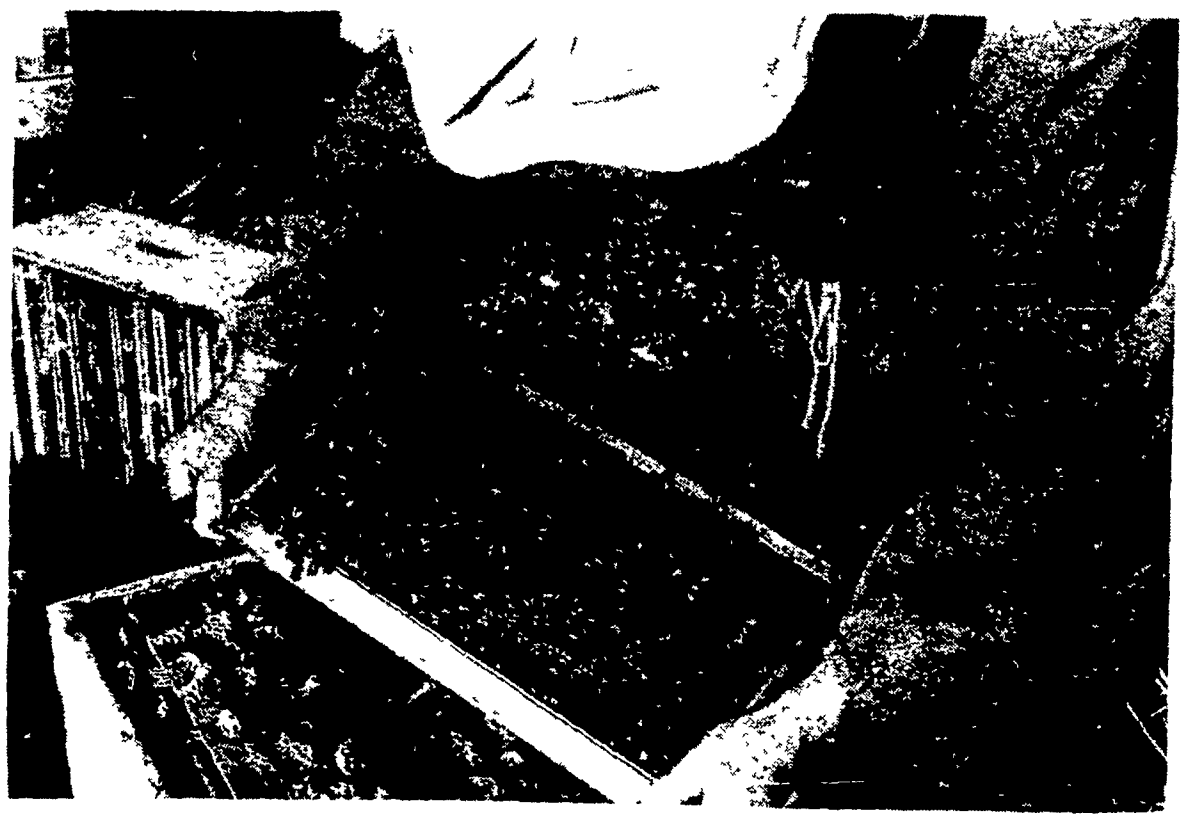
The bee hive is the center of all the honeybee hustle and bustle. Two supers, one shallow, one deep, rest on top of a bottom board and foundation, with a lid sheltering the honeymakers from the elements. Bees enter and exit through a slot along the bottom board.

Bees, bees, everywhere — and they are 'bzzzzzzzy' filling wax combs with the fruits of their labor. Each bee knows its own hive and cannot enter any other without a fight. The trick to keeping them happy is having plenty of flowers nearby, and moving very, very slowly.

Howard Brossman, Rehrerburg, has been raising bees since he was ten-years-old. The Berks County apiarist admits he gets stung occasionally, but doesn't fear working the bees without a veil.



Brossman eases a frame out of the super and watches the worker bees and nurse bees filling honeycombs. The queen bee lays an egg in each cell and young worker bees hatch out in 21 days, fully developed and able to sting.

Bees

laying thousands and thousands of eggs."

Brossman told how each bee must return to its own hive every day. Guard bees are posted at each hive entrance and drive off any wayfaring bees who mistakenly drop by.

Becoming a guard bee is one step on a honey bee's progressive promotion chart, he said. When the worker bee is hatched after a 21 day incubation, it immediately begins its duties as a nurse bee and feeds a mixture of pollen, honey and water to the other larvae in the 'nursery'.

The worker bee then graduates to guard, and finally earns its wings. It then takes to the field to gather nectar and pollinate flowers, working itself to a seasonal grave as its wings become torn and tattered. The worker bee's life ends in service.

The 'lazy' bee of the hive is the drone, the male. Only four or five drones are permitted in a hive. Their only function is to mate with the queen bee during her first year, said Brossman.

After the queen mates for life, the drones are tolerated in the hive until fall. They are then driven from the hive to a death of starvation.

"The worker bees don't want to feed them over winter," Brossman said.

For the worker bees and queen bee remaining in the hive over winter, the chance of survival depends on the amount of honey they have produced that summer, Brossman pointed out.

"I can tell by lifting the top super, where the honey is stored, if there is enough for them to make it through the winter," he said with pride. "Some years there's hardly any honey, even for my family's use. The bees have used it up to raise their young."

Last year, he said, his hives yielded 300 pounds of honey, where the year before, they made 600 pounds. It all depends on the weather, he explained.

The apiarist told how the bees produced honey from nectar gathered from flowers and blossoms.

"When the worker bee enters the hive, the nectar is put into the frames found in the bottom of the lower super. Thousand of bees then fan their wings creating an air current which evaporates moisture from the nectar.

"The fanning maintains the hive at one temperature, acting like a heater when it's cool and an air conditioner when it's hot. If a hive gets too cold in the winter and the bee larva die in the frames, called 'chill brood', the bees will uncap the cells, remove the dead larva, and the queen will deposit new eggs.

"Once the moisture has been evaporated from the nectar, the 'honey' is moved up through the hive and put into the honeycomb cells. The bees continue fanning as the honey 'ripens'.

When the honey is ripe, they seal it with a wax cap. If it isn't capped, moisture can get in and the honey will sour."

Brossman said he allows his bees to make honey until October,

(Turn to Page C20)

"Without honey bees, there'd be no honey, no fruit, nothing," states Brossman.

A puff of smoke releases its calming effect on the bees as Brossman examines the frames stored inside the bottom super. The bees continue to work on the frames he holds, feeding the young a mixture of honey, pollen and water.

Several state counties high gypsy moth risk areas

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Risk designation changes in areas regulated to prevent the artificial spread of the destructive gypsy moth have been announced by plant health officials of the U.S Department of Agriculture

Greg Rohwer, staff director of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said the changes reflect new distribution patterns of the leafeating caterpillars that stripped 5.1 million acres of forest, shade and ornamental trees in 1980.

Under federal regulations, Rohwer said, infested areas are divided into high-risk, heavily infested areas and low-risk, more lightly infested areas.

"Risk," he said, "is defined in terms of the possibility of artifical spread of the moth occurring when egg masses or other life stages hitchhike via the movement of people or goods."

Rohwer said regulated articles may move freely between high-risk areas and low-risk areas or between low-risk areas and unregulated areas. When moving from high-risk areas to or through unregulated areas, however, they must first be inspected and treated, if necessary and receive "pest-free" certification.

High-risk areas now include most of eastern and southern Maine, all of New Hampshire except Coos County; western and southern Vermont; all of Massachusetts; all of Rhode Island; all of Connecticut; eastern New York and southern New York as far west as Tompkins and Tioga Counties plus parts of Chemung, Monroe and Oneida Counties; all of New Jersey except Hudson County; eastern and central Pennsylvania as far west as Bradford, Clearfield and Cambria and Franklin Counties; part of northeastern and north-central Maryland; and parts of Isabella County in Michigan.

Low-Risk areas include parts of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin

Previously regulated areas in Maryland, Michigan, New York and Ohio have been released from regulations following treatment to eliminate moth populations and surveys to confirm that the treatment was effective.

Five major classes of articles governed by the regulations are trees and woody shrubs with roots attached (unless grown indoors, year-round) logs and pulpwood (unless going to approved mills); firewood; mobile homes and associated equipment, such as awnings or trailer skirts; and recreational vehicles moving from certain campgrounds.

Other items, such as outdoor furniture, also may be restricted if they are likely to spread the pest

Changes in the designations took effect upon publication in the April 9 Federal Register. Copies are available from USDA-APHIA, rm 302E, Administration Bldg, Washington, D.C. 20250.

These are emergency measures needed to prevent spread of the gypsy moth, said Rohwer. The public is invited to comment on the regulations until June 8.

Written comments should be sent to USDA-APHIS, rm. 635, Federal Bldg., Hyattsville, Md 20782.

producing a wildflower honey from golden rod, wild aster, dutch clover, alfalfa, raspberries, dandelion, locust, and fruit blossoms. The honey is 'harvested' in a series of steps

First, the frames are removed from the supers and the bees are shaken off Then the wax caps that seal the honey in the combs are removed, and the frames are stood on-end in a machine called an extractor. This device, which is turned by hand, draws the honey away from the wax comb through centrifugal force.

After the honey is removed, the frames, complete with wax combs, are placed back in the hive, and the process begins again

Even though taking care of his bees and a few head of livestock keep the retired bee inspector busy on his farm, he takes a vacation' each year to Florida — a working vacation, of course, since he is helping friend Paul Zeigler transport bee hives to the orange groves

Brossman explained the bees would become dormant if they remained in Berks County over winter, but in Florida they keep active and stay in shape. They travel south in hives strapped shut and loaded on a truck, making the trip in October and returning in time for the apple blossoms in Pennsylvania sometime in March

His first trip to Florida in 1938 took 30 hours to drive, he recalled Now with the better highway systems, the trip is faster and more enjoyable

Brossman, like his bees, has been a hard worker all his life, keeping the family farm, purchased by his father in 1921, in production As a dedicated beekeeper, Brossman stresses the tremendous value of bees.

"Bees are important to everyone The most important thing they do is pollination Without them, what would we have? We'd have no fruit, no food, nothing," he concluded, as he watched his winged 'factory' workers slip inside the hive and shut down for the night

NARVON — Located on the rolling hills of eastern Lancaster County, the farm home of Jacob and Judy Stoltzfus, Narvon R2, offers a commanding view of the surrounding countryside. The interior of the home offers a peaceful, refreshing kind of retreat, achieved after two diligent years of remodeling. The Stoltzfus home will be open to visitors as part of the Lancaster County Ladies Day Out this Thursday.

The home has been in the Stoltzfus family for about 40 years, having been bought by Jacob's parents, but Judy and Jacob have lived there just 2½ years. They operate a 56-acre dairy farm and have three children: Wafi, 6; Vonda, 4; and Jared, 4½ months.

Although they are unsure when the original stone part of the home was built, Judy speculates that it must have been around the mid-1880's. When they were working on an upstairs wall and broke through plaster to the original stone wall, they discovered papers dating from 1886, an indication they might have been there when the house was built

One of the most interesting features of the house is the windows which are encased by rounded walls on the interior. The walls are nearly 20 inches thick, allowing deep window wells, with the original wood being retained for the sills in most places. The rounded windows can be found both upstairs and down.

New windows replaced the old as one of the first remodeling steps. Downstairs the windows are six panes over six, and upstairs there are 12-paned windows

As a further conservation measure, the Stoltzfuses insulated the attic floor and downstairs extended the walls below the chair rail so that insulation could be added and covered with dry wall.

A fireplace in the original home has been covered up before Jacob and Judy moved in, but they took the initiative of adding a stovepipe in that place so they can have the option of adding a stove if they want.

Judy believes that originally there was a circular staircase in the home, but it, too, had been removed before they moved in. They moved the stairway from one side of the house to the other, and while they left it open they added a door at the top to conserve energy.

Another major change in the house was moving the kitchen from the north side to the south, and adding sliding glass doors which will eventually open onto a patio and lead to the proposed play area and the garden.

With the change in kitchen location, the Stoltzfus family can sit at their table and look out at the surrounding farms. When Judy is working at the sink she has a view of both the barn and the proposed play area for the children.

The kitchen, of which Judy is justifiably proud, is well-equipped for ease of working. There is ample counter space and a built-in appliance corner The cherry wood cabinets reflect a mellow feeling. A feature much used by the children is a counter, at table level, which allows them to play or do homework while being close to their mother but out of her way as she moves about the kitchen.

One feature of the kitchen is an old clock shelf which had been

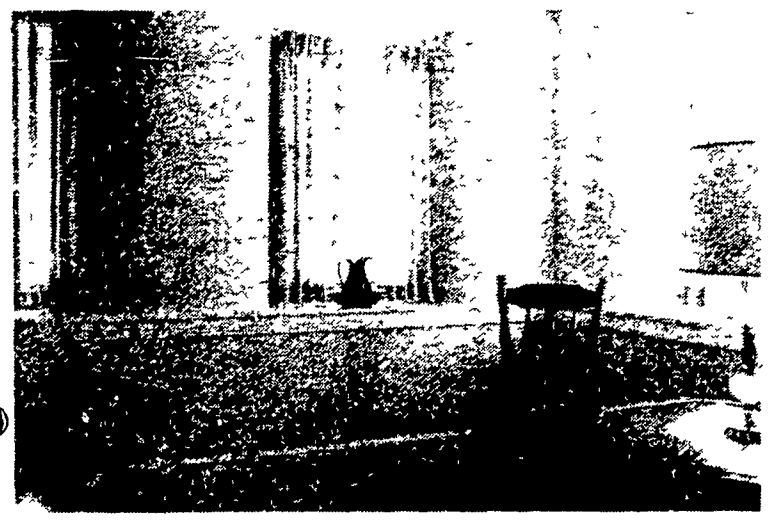
Judy stirs some "friendship dough" which was shared by a friend. She enjoys her spacious counters and cupboards. Wafi, left, and Vonda look on with interest.



An interesting feature of the Stoltzfus house is the rounded effect at the windows, part of a treatment commonly used in homes with thick stone walls.

The Stoltzfus family made up for the total lack of closets in this old farm house by adding generous ones in each of the four bedrooms on the second floor.

Commission wants antlerless harvest of 65,000

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Game Commission's proposal to authorize the issuance of 451,250 antlerless deer licenses this year is designed to produce a reported harvest of about 65,000 whitetails, game management officials said this week.

Last year the Game Commissin authorized the issuance of 410,600 antlerless deer licenses, in the hope that hunters would report a harvest of at least 60,000 animals The actual reported harvest of antlerless whitetails last year was 62,281.

This year the Game Commission proposes to increase the allocations of antlerless licenses in 44 counties, and to decrease antlerless license allocations in another 20 counties. The agency is proposing to keep the antlerless allocations in two counties at the 1980 level.

While there usually is a strong correlation between the number of antlerless licenses allocated and the number of deer taken, as well as resultant adjustments to the size of the total deer herd, such is not always the case.

Usually, an increase in the allocation of antlerless licenses results in a larger harvest of deer, and a resultant lowering of the total population.

However, antlerless license allocations are designed this year to keep deer herd sizes at the same levels as last year in 21 counties. The allocations will permit deer herds to increase in 24 counties, while total population of whitetails should be reduced in 21 counties.

Paradoxically, in some counties the number of licenses for antlerless deer will be decreased, but the number of deer in the county will be further reduced. Likewise, in some counties the allocations will be increased but the herd will be permitted to grow in total numbers.

The seemingly contradictory situation results from combinations of factors affecting deer numbers. Such factors as reported vs. actual harvest, sex ratios, age classes, percentages of yearling females, survival and productivity rates, hunter success rates, out-of-season losses, etc., all enter into the picture.

By knowing the reported and actual removal rates, the age-sex structure of the herd, productivity figures and a few other basic pieces of information, the Game Commission is able to calculate the number of deer, by sex and age, present at any given time of the year in every county of the state.

The key to permissible population numbers is the condition of the deer herd and the over-winter carrying capacity of the range.

Game Commission studies show that about 40 deer can survive a winter in a square mile of forest that is in the seedling-sapling or brush (under five inches in diameter) stage of growth. In the pole timber stage of forest development (five through eleven inches in diameter), a square mile of forest can support only about 10 deer in a typical winter. In the saw timber stage (over eleven inches in diameter), about 20 deer can be supported per square mile.

A wildlife manager who knows how many deer there will be prior to the hunting season can subtract the number of deer that can be supported through the winter and readily calculate how many deer must be removed by hunters.

The number of antlerless deer that need to be harvested will be the difference between the number of bucks that will be taken and the total number of deer that need to be removed.

The Game Commission knows how many antlerless deer licenses need to be issued to remove one deer in every county. The figure varies from county to county and from one year to the next.

In some counties, an average of 3.91 licenses issued will result in the harvesting of a deer. In other counties, it may take an advantage of 20.88 licenses for each deer taken. The statewide average is 6.9 licenses to takone deer.

In 13 counties, over 10 antlerless licenses have to be issued to harvest a deer.

Thus, the number of licenses issued in any county (or the state as a whole), may not be meaningful, even from one year to the next, unless all of the factors involved are taken into account.

Eastern moles dig shallow tunnels at a rate of 10 to 20 feet an hour, up to 160 feet in a night, the National Geographic Society reports. To match a mole, a man would have to excavate in the same time a tunnel nearly half a mile long and large enough to wriggle through.

added by Jacob's parents.

In the section of the home used as family room and play area, an enormous eight-sided beam has been exposed. The beam once supported the weight of the very thick outside walls. Almost all of the door frames and baseboards are original to the house

Another necessity of modern times was a complete modernization of wiring throughout the house

Now that the inside is done to their satisfaction, Jacob and Judy have plans to cement the porches and perhaps restore the stone walls either by sandblasting which they feel may not be practical because of extensive repairs which will have to be done, or by replacing the plaster with stucco.

The house was remodeled with a thought to making it comfortable and livable for their family To that end, Judy and Jacob succeeded and their farm house is a lovely example of a home which will meet the needs of a growing young family.

New cupboards and counters give the kitchen a bright, new look. For Judy, changing the kitchen from the north to the south side of the house has added a lovely view and lots of sun.

Elk County study examines egg damage

RIDGWAY — A three-year study of egg damage in Elk County has shown a cracking percentage of 8.76 percent, which amounts to an annual loss of $38,609 in a 70,000-layer operation.

The study was conducted by C.M. Skillington, Director of the Elk County Extension Service, and H.C. Jordan, Penn State Extension Specialist in Poultry Science.

A total of 3,800 eggs were gathered in the study in 100-egg samples each month from each of four flocks of SCW Leghorns in cages in two large cage houses Each egg was measured for several quality parameters and total number of cracked eggs were calculated into a percent for each handling of the egg starting with percent as laid, percent after gathering, percent after cooling, after washing, after being weighed and candled, and total cracked eggs.

Surprising results show that the largest percent cracks occurred after cooling overnight. A total of 2.45 percent of all eggs observed cracked after holding in a standard farm cooler at 55 degrees temperature and 75 percent humidity over one, two or three nights. There is no apparent explanation for this cracking of eggs occuring when eggs were kept perfectly still in pulp filler flats inside a cooler.

The study further showed that 2.15 percent of all eggs were cracked while being laid. These eggs were gathered at the cage roll-out tray off the belt before it moved. This was the second largest percentage cracks for the entire study.

The third and fourth greatest areas of egg damage were quite similar with 1.66 percent damaged during washing and 1.64 percent cracked during belt gathering.

The lease amount of egg damage .855 percent occured during candling and weighing. This was virtually the same for the first six-month of lay as well as the second six-month of lay.

Total egg damage was 8.76% for 3800 eggs from all four flocks over three years.

Noticeable differences occurred between the first six months and the second six months of lay Nearly twice as many eggs were damaged at point of lay the second six months of lay compared ot the first six months of lay. Three times as many eggs were damaged during gathering the second six months compared to the first six months of lay. A total of .67 percent fewer eggs were shown to open or become damaged in the cooler during the second six months compared to the first six months of production. Twice as many eggs showed damage during washing the second six months compared to the first six months of lay.

If a 30-cent per dozen lower price is paid for cracked eggs compared to Grade A eggs from these 70,000 layers, the normal production of 21 dozen marketable eggs per bird housed or 1,470,000 dozen total times the 8.755 percent eggshell damage means 128,698.5 dozen cracked eggs produced annually or a loss of $38,609.55.

This cracked egg problem has been reduced about two percent per year for an annual savings of 29,400 dozen at $.30/doz or $8,820 increase in income each year. However, egg production and egg quality have also been increasing.

This study indicates efforts may be necessary to slow machinery down and/or use cage plastic floor inserts in cages the second six months of lay to bounce-em-easy when eggs are laid.

Also needed are further studies of feed quality from home-mix feed mills as it relates to eggshell quality.

Strain of bird and how pullets are raised along with health records need more study to prevent excessive eggshell damage.

Savage mothers

A reader asks:

I recently put sows in a farrowing building and they started savaging their young. I can't understand why they started this now Any ideas?

Dr. Trayer comments:

If the breeding stock that you've put into the farrowing building has not been subjected to any confinement, it is possible the farrowing crates have brought out the worst behavior in these animals.

Another consideration is the way this building is being managed. If the environment is excessive — that is, primarily, the temperature is greater than 80 degrees Fahrenheit — the sows many be uncomfortable due to caked udders and aggressive behavior results.

Reproductive problems should also be investigated, such as inflamed mammary glands abnormal uterine discharge, or off milk, since these symptoms may trigger the aggressive behavior.

If the needle teeth of the baby pigs are not being cut properly, leaving sharp edges, an irritated sow may turn on her young.

The sudden change in diet possible may cause the sows to react violently toward their young. If they were allowed unlimited feed before entering the farrowing room, and are suddenly switched to limited feed at farrowing time, the breeding stock may become upset. With the current high feed costs, limiting the feed in the breeding stock prior to and during farrowing will create a better economic situation.

You will occasionally find an individual female, particularly in gilts, that has a temperament which becomes disturbed by the presence of young. To help remedy this individual situation, there are tranquilizers available to allow the gilt to get used to the pigs.

If, however, this is a group behavioral problems, the source of the aggressive behavior must be identified, whether it is ventilation, heat, needle teeth, etc.

Chester County holds sheep course

ATGLEN — Breezeview Farm, owned by Bill and Joan MacCauley of Atglen, was the site of the first annual Basic Sheep Management Meeting sponsored by the Chester County Extension Service and Penn State University.

Approximately 18 producers from throughout the county saw actual demonstrations of shearing, docking, castrating and hoof trimming, feeding programs, and internal and external parasite control.

Demonstrations and talks were given by Bill and Joan MacCauley of Breezeview Farms, and David Lytle, Agway representative and Hampshire breeder from Strawberry Hill Hampshires.

For further information on sheep and other agricultural programs, contact Cheryl Moran at 215/696-3500.

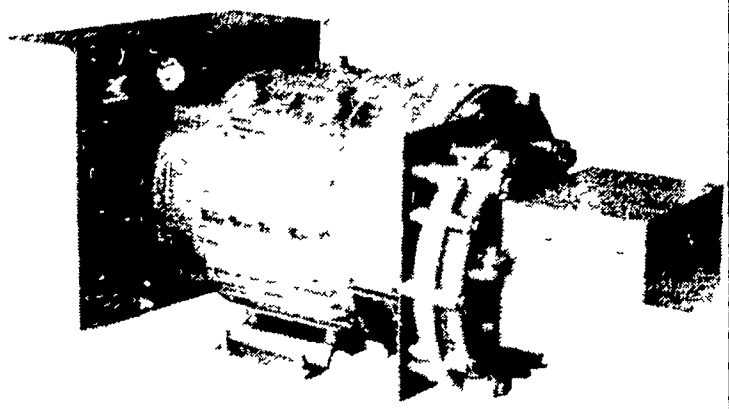
Progress is important, but a new tractor does not make your MAXI-POWER PTO generator obsolete because of a different speed of a PTO shaft. All MAXI-POWER PTO's have interchangeable gearboxes. Gearboxes are carried in stock and can be installed in minutes by our servicemen, and at a very low price.



Call us today for a generator to keep pace with your farm's growth. Whether PTO speed is 540 or 1000, MAXI-POWER is the only generator for you.

DRY YOUR GRAIN THE NATURAL WAY

★ 50% LESS SHRINKAGE
★ LESS POWDER WHEN GRINDING INTO FEED
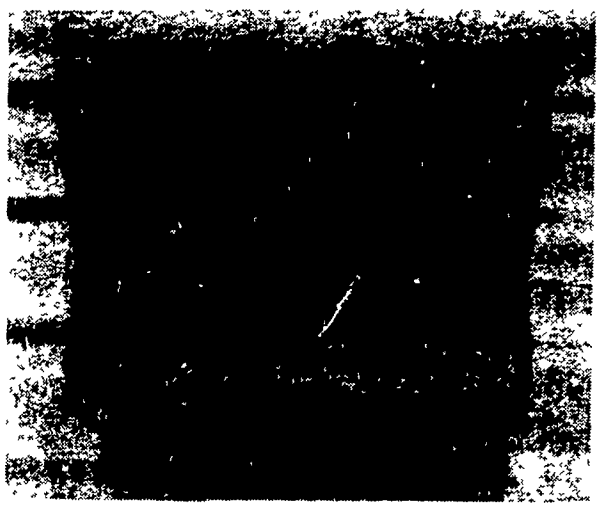
★ HARDER, MORE DURABLE GRAIN - LESS BROKEN KERNELS
★ GLOSSIER COLOR

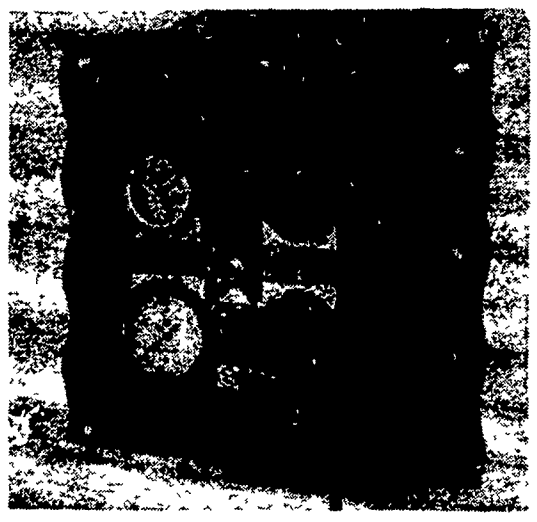
GET THE VERSATILITY YOU NEED FOR AIR DRYING WITH A:



MARTIN LOW TEMP CONTROL

◄ LOW TEMP CONTROL

PLENUM THERMOSTAT WITH PRESSURE GAUGE ►



4 DIFFERENT SETTINGS

1. Automatic Fan Only: fan only runs when the natural air will dry grain.
2. Manuel-Fan Only: Fan runs all the time by passing automatic controls.
3. Automatic-Fan & Heater: fan runs continuous. Heater is normally off, but will add only 7% of heat when natural air will not dry grain.
4. Manual-Fan & Heater: fan runs continuous. Heater is operated by the thermostat located underneath the floor of the bin.

ADVANTAGES OF USING THE MARTIN LOW TEMP SYSTEM

1. Dry the way you want with just the flip of a switch.
2. Electric is not wasted by running the fan when the natural air is not drying grain.
3. Cost of LP gas heat is 3 times cheaper than electric heaters or electric drying bulbs.
4. At any time more heat can be applied by the turn of a valve to remove excessive moisture which is giving a problem.
5. Static pressure gauge reveals volume & air going through the grain.

"Why Commonwealth National cares as much about promoting YOUR business as we do our own."

Bob Bucher V P
Agri-Loan Department

"At Commonwealth National we know that good business for farmers means good business for us. That's why our Agri-Loan Department must see you through the rough times as well as the smooth. It takes people like us to do that—people who understand farmers. Three of our four lending officers, in fact, grew up on farms. We know that farming is a big business as well as a difficult business which often requires big investments.

Pennsylvania's largest agri-lender.

"Today, Commonwealth National has more funds committed to agricultural business development than any other bank in Pennsylvania. In just 10 years our agricultural loan portfolio has grown from $11 million to almost $63 million. So it makes good sense for us to do everything we can to insure that the agricultural economy of Central Pennsylvania is strong . . . and that you stay in business.

"Our concern for your success, as you can see, goes far beyond providing you with operating funds. We offer guidance and counsel on everything from more efficient means of ordering agrichemicals to new markets for your products. We may even be able to give you advice on holding off on a major capital expenditure until the time is right. If you're looking for our help on the financial side of farming, just give us a call. We'll be happy to drive out and talk things over.

Product promotions throughout the year.

"Meanwhile, we'll help insure you'll have a successful farm business by continuing to develop strong markets for your products. One of the ways we plan to do this is to celebrate May as 'Egg Month' by sponsoring 'Brunch at the Bank'. It will feature a giant five-foot omelet that the public will be invited to eat outside our offices at 28 Penn Square starting at noon, Friday, May 1. Omelet cookbooks will help produce more interest in the tastier uses of eggs. And later on in the month, omelet-making demonstrations will be held at four of our offices.

"Commonwealth National plans to continue with different farm product promotions such as this throughout the years.

"But above all, remember, you can call us at 717-291-3036 and ask for Agri-Loan information anytime."

Consider the wind when planning poultry houses

GEORGETOWN, Del. — Energy conservation is something that needs to be taken into consideration from the very start when you're planning a poultry farmstead. This includes knowing which way the prevailing winds blow.

The orientation and placement of buildings in relation to the wind has a lot to do with how much energy you'll need for both heat and ventilation, says University of Delaware energy management spcialist Norman Collins.

A researcher at the Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station, has spent much of his time over the past six years studying the energy needs of poultry producers on the Delmarva peninsula.

One of the first things to consider, says Collins, is wind action. As air passes over a poultry house it produces a high pressure area on one side and a low pressure area on the other. This pressure differential has a lot to do with how much energy is required for fan operation or heating.

The magnitude of the pressure difference is a function of wind velocity and increases at a geometric rate. The higher the velocity, the greater the difference.

A five-mile-per-hour wind and a ten-mile-per-hour wind will have much different effects on energy demand since four times as much air is forced through the same building cracks at ten miles per hour as at five.

Another important factor is wind direction. You need to find out the prevailing wind direction and orient your poultry house accordingly. The pressure differential will be greatest when the wind hits the structure at right angles to its long side.

If the wind hits the building at any other angle than 90 degrees, this difference tends to be reduced. You'll get the greatest reduction in wind pressure differential if the long side of the building runs parallel to the prevailing wind, says the engineer.

This creates a certain conflict of interest when you're planning a poultry farmstead, points out Delaware extension agricultural engineer Ernest Walpole, who has worked with Collins on many of his poultry energy studies.

Farmers generally want good natural ventilation in the summer- in which case you want to orient the building so that it's perpendicular to the summer wind. But they're also trying to save heat in the winter.

So they're better off placing it parallel to prevailing winter winds to reduce the amount of unwanted air infiltration.

"On Delmarva you can have it both ways," says Walpole. "In summer the prevailing winds come from the south, so you can get maximum natural ventilation when a broiler house is oriented east-west. In winter the prevailing winds come from the north-northwest, so you get the least infiltration from the same east-west orientation."

There are three terms the builder, the grower and the planner need to know, when they're talking about air movement in relation to a building structure, says Collins.

The first is air exchange rate.

This is the total volume of air per unit of time that will pass through the structure You can divide this total volume of air into several parts, one of which is ventilation.

Wind direction affects energy costs in poultry houses whether you're cooling them in the summer or heating them in the winter. Farmers should take into account the prevailing winds when locating a new poultry house. It could save money.

This is the amount of air movement required to maintain desired environmental conditions inside the house – to eliminate relative humidity and ammonia.

A grower can do this either with fans or through natural ventilation.

The third term you need to understand is infiltration. This is the difference between total air exchange and the amount required for ventilation.

It's unneeded air that filters in through cracks when ventilating fans aren't running. In the winter it boosts your heating load and fuel costs.

Research on turkeys in the North Central U.S. suggests that air exchange for whatever purpose in a poultry house accounts for 80 percent of the total heat load.

"Our work with a computer model of broiler growout indicates that in this part of the country infiltration (excess air exchange) accounts for 30 percent of this heating load," says Collins. "This is assuming that power ventilation is used to maintain the house environment. This amounts to one-third of your total fuel requirement in the broiler house."

In an existing house there are many ways to reduce the winter fuel load caused by infiltration, though there's probably no way to get it down to zero. (1) Use properly installed automatic inlet systems. (2) Caulk the big cracks between block and sill. (3) Consider perimeter insulation in the chamber used for end room brooding. (4) Put plastic over the end doors. (5) And keep your windows and curtains tightly closed.

If you're building a new broiler house you'll certainly want to do these things

There's one big danger, though, when you take these steps, cautions the engineer. Reducing infiltration increases the risk when you have a power failure in the house.

Chickens produce a lot of heat If the electricity is off so fans aren't working, that heat is retained in the building. The result can be heavy flock mortality even if the temperature outside is only 30 degrees F.

The time it takes for birds to die or for heat to reach fatal levels depends on the age of the birds. It may be less than three hours. When the fans don't operate as they should, you can expect the house temperature to reach 100 degrees F

If you're going to rely on natural summer ventilation, you want to orient your poultry house east-west on Delmarva, as noted by Walpole. And the house shouldn't be any wider than 45 feet. This is why it may be possible to ventilate narrow shed roof houses better than wider ones.

Buildings also must be spaced properly if you intend to use natural ventilation. This means allowing 100 to 150 feet between each unit. If houses are too close, wind that is deflected over the first won't get back to the ground for maximum impact on the second one.

On Delmarva, growers aren't using this much distance between units, probably because of the space required. Also, since they use some mechanical fan assistance, they're not totally dependent on natural ventilation.

Fans are needed in this part of the country because the wind can't always be relied on.

Weather data analysis shows that in the summer we're quite likely to have periods of up to six hours without any wind at all, says Collins.

More than just wind is involved in deciding which way to orient a new poultry house. Though you may end up facing it east-west, this decision won't be based entirely on wind direction.

Other factors including solar heat load are also involved.

Heart of Penn sets 1981 meeting topics

DORNSIFE — Scheduling their 1981 meeting topics was part of the agenda for the Heart of Penn Goat Breeders' Co-op recent meeting.

A management clinic is planned for May, and a picnic, with the selection of a young person to represent the group as Heart of Penn Sweetheart, is scheduled for June.

There will be no meeting in July. In August there will be a wine and cheese tasting party featuring homemade wines, goat cheese and breads.

No meeting is scheduled for September. In October, a speaker will present a program on sire selection.

November's meeting will feature a veterinarian's talk on maintaining a healthy herd. And, December's program will feature breeding season or winter management.

Food future worries experts

COLUMBIA, Mo. — They critized U.S. agricultural policy and worried that this country could face serious food shortages in the years ahead.

Sadness crept into their faces as they talked of millions of acres of farmland being lost each year of man and nature.

They spoke of the ethics of forcing American technology on developing nations, and decried the failing support for U.S. agricultural research and education.

The event was an April seminar on "U.S. Agriculture and the World Food Economy" at the University of Missouri-Columbia. More than that, it was an occasion to honor three recently retired UMC professors who have made important contributions to agriculture:

• Douglas Ensminger gained world distinction for leadership in agricultural development. From 1951-1970 he was director of the Ford Foundation that developed a program in India. During ten years as professor of rural sociology at UMC, he headed a world study of population and food.

• J.M. (Milt) Poehlman is recognized internationally for contributions to crop improvements through genetics and breeding. The agronomy professor has released 18 varieties of small grains in his 45-year career and has served in India, Romania, Mali, and Tanzania.

• Ernest R. Sears is UMC's only member of the National Academy of Sciences and is considered the world's foremost authority on wheat genetics and evolution. In his 44-year career, he has developed basic genetic techniques and materials used throughout the world.

Sears could not be there for the special recognition: he's in Israel working with scientists to improve wheat by crossing it with wild grasses and other distant wheat relatives. He did however, write a paper that was presented at the seminar.

And Harold Breimyer was there. The professor of agricultural economics commented on policy changes that would effect the world economy.

As each man spoke, there was a feeling that Planet Earth could be in serious trouble unless some things are done.

"If we are to maintain good agricultural productivity, there are some hard commitments that must be kept," Poehlman said.

"Among these are reducing the loss of prime cropland to non-agricultural use, reducing soil erosion, conserving genetic resources and developing and conserving water supplies."

Poehlman especially urged continued support for research, emphasizing that science requires a long-term commitment.

Breimyer concurred, noting what he called the alarming "downward drift" in agricultural research funding

Both men emphasized the need for international trade and worldwide sharing of research and education

"We are a young country compared to India or China. Our agricultural system developed when land was plentiful and labor scarce," reminded Poehlman

"What would be our land and population situation when we are as old as India or China? Or just 50 years from now? Individually, we can't have much influence on increasing food production in India. Bolivia or Mali, but we can have some influence on maintaining a productive agriculture at home."

Ensminger emphasized that while the U.S. should be involved in helping developing nations, introducing new technology in them may not always be good for the people there, even if it is profitable.

It's a matter of ethics.

"One of the criteria for selection or rejection of technology must be whether it will contribute to a more just society." Ensminger said. "If the answer is no, it should be applied only under extraordinary circumstances."

Calling the world food situation "fragile," Ensminger said the only hope of avoiding a disastrous world food crisis in 1981 will come from a good harvest in the main cereal producing regions.

"Grain imports from the developing countries are expected to reach 94 million tons in June 1981, and will continue to increase through the decade of the 80s."

But even with grain imports, malnutrition and hunger continue. Ensminger said studies showed that two-thirds of the population in the developing countries (1.2 to 1.5 billion) are suffering malnutrition. And of these, he said, "One can assume that more than 1 billion of the developing countries' people live in continuous fear of hunger."

Both he and Poehlman urged population control.

"The world will lose the food production race unless population growth is drastically curtailed," Poehlman warned.

In his research paper, Sears concentrated mainly on improving wheat which ranks second only to rice as the world's most important food. What he had to say had implications to science and the world food situation in general.

He pointed out that wheat yields haven't been much of a problem — so far. But most of the yield increase has come by replacing low-yield, impure wheats with high-yielding, pure line varieties.

"This process has greatly reduced the genetic variability available to breeders for the further improvement of wheat," Sears reported.

"Variability" is the key word. Without it, plant breeders and farmers would be in a tough spot if a devastating new disease came along.

Such a think happened in 1970 when southern leaf blight suddenly appeared on the scene and threatened the nation's corn crop. If it hadn't been for a totally different corn types geneticists had salted away in seed vaults, they wouldn't have been able to develop resistant varieties able to withstand the blight.

Besides supporting Sears' concern for a continuous, solid research base, Breimyer had plenty to say about agricultural policy in general.

He showed special concern about the U.S. posture to withdraw from the international scene.

He said Americans are "flirting with the impluse to run from trouble" and have elected officials who are "pulling in U.S. horns."

"The wish to withdraw (from international involvement) may be natural, but the cause is futile. The United States cannot stay aloof; it has joined the heightened interdependence among nations."

The American economy and agriculture in particular, he said, depends on the rest of the world as a market, plus a source of such things as oil, fertilizers, minerals, etc.

He said the 1980s will be marked by "more instances of relative scarcity than the burdens of surplus which marked the past 20 years."

He urged changes in policy that would mean more support for agricultural research and accompanying education, more protection of productive land and less emphasis on using farm products for fuel.

Breimyer said the consequences of former President Carter's ambitious ethanol proposal "would be devastating to both our corn export trade and our livestock and poultry industries."

"Bluntly put, grain is not an economically sound alternative source of motor fuel."

Lebanon schedules forum

LEBANON — The Lebanon County Cooperative Extension Service is sponsoring a public forum on using sewage sludge on farmland.

"Most of Lebanon County's larger municipalities are now in the process of negotiating agreements with farmers to dispose of the sludge on farmland," said Newton Barr, County Agent. "This meeting is designed to help to answer questions regarding the feasibility, safety, economic value and legal aspects of this type of disposal."

The forum is scheduled for Thursday, April 30 at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Lebanon Municipal Building. Speakers will include Penn State's Raymond Shipp, and the Department of Environmental Resources' Francis Fair and Glenn Ayers.

Would cause problems for farmers

Co-op Council disputes oil recommendations

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Council of Farmer Cooperatives said Monday that consequences of National Petroleum Council proposals for dealing with oil shortages would create an inordinate expense for farmers and jeopardize full farm output.

The co-op council asserted that NPC recommendations, if adopted by the government, could result in at least a doubling or quadrupling of gasoline and diesel fuel prices in the event of another Mideast oil disruption.

The NPC, an industry advisory committee to the Secretary of Energy, undertook the study last year to examine issues bearing on emergency preparedness, in the event imported oil supplies are interrupted.

The study recognizes continued U.S. vulnerability to foreign oil disruptions and recommends use of: (1) Price increases as a competitive market allocator of fuel, (2) Conservation measures, and (3) Switching from oil to other fuel during disruptions of up to 2 million barrels per day.

According to the NPC recommendations, government standby measures dealing with distribution inequities and hardships during emergencies wouldn't take effect until a shortfall exceeds 2 to 3 million barrels per day.

"That's too late. The issue is not whether there should be government involvement, but when we must have government action to ensure that farmers and others at the end of the supply line get the fuel they need to keep operating," said Kenneth D. Naden, president, National Council of Farmer Cooperatives.

Naden commented that the proposed conservation measures are likely to be unpopular and largely ineffective, particularly in rural areas where shortages are usually concentrated. Indeed, he added, the Reagan Administration has recently announced its intentions to terminate many of these programs.

Using data from the NPC study, Naden said that a two-million-barrel per day national shortfall, which the U.S. experienced during the Arab embargo of 1973-74, could raise gasoline prices to at least $3.50 per gallon He noted that diesel fuel prices would probably increase at an even faster rate.

"Farmers may be forced to pay these prices, if it's the only way to get fuel to run their tractors," said Naden. "But they are obviously not the kind of prices that any producer can pay for very long and still hope to stay in business." An equally important question, he said, is whether fuel would be available to rural areas during shortages at any price

Naden also pointed out that energy cost increases of this magnitude, throughout the food system, could have a tremendous impact on consumer grocery bills. Citing Agriculture Department studies, he said that food prices could increase by as much as 15 percent, if all costs were passed through.

The NCFC chief executive said that farmer cooperatives know from experience how supply disruptions affect farmers and rural markets. Currently, farmer cooperatives own eight efficient refineries and supply about 45 percent of on-farm fuel. In addition, they are the sole fuel suppliers in over 900 rural communities.

"During the Iranian Revolution in 1979," said Naden, "cooperative refineries were forced to operate at 50 percent of capacity, when the industry was averaging 85 percent. This was at a time when oil imports were actually at higher levels than in the previous year.

This disproportionate impact translated into shortages of gasoline and diesel fuel in rural areas during spring planting.

"We are especially concerned about the regional impact of the next supply disruption. Certainly, the NPC study recommendations don't provide any basis for us to feel very secure. We have projected from NPC data that gasoline prices could go at least $6.60 per gallon in the event of a 20 percent regional shortfall And in view of the Iranian experience, we expect regional shortages to be heavily concentrated in rural areas."

Naden also expressed concern that the NPC study failed to recognize the priority needs of agriculture. "National energy policy has consistently recognized agriculture's fuel priority needs," he said. "Without such a priority, there is no guarantee that U.S. agriculture can maintain full food and fiber production."

The cooperative leader said that the U.S. doesn't have to gamble with what appropriate action to take during the next disruption. He said there's a logical approach that would be fair and equitable to all.

"The key to managing disruptions is a standby program which assures crude oil access for refiners serving all areas of the country, so that disruptions are shared equitably. Then the existing market system can be allowed to function, and products will have a chance to move efficiently to consumers."

Naden noted such action, taken on a timely basis, should minimize regional disruptions and help avoid the need for more extensive government intervention.

He added that to the extent disruptions become too severe to be managed on the crude oil side alone, standby product allocation authority should be in place to handle the critical needs of agriculture and other priority users.

This approach, said Nader, would relieve the fear and uncertainty over whether farmers and other essential groups would be assured of critical petroleum supplies during the next crude oil import disruption. Noting the September 30 expiration date for present authorities dealing with disruptions, he urged Congress and the Administration to begin immediate consideration of these or other responsible options designed to address crude oil interruptions.

The National Council of Farmer Cooperatives is a nationwide association of cooperative businesses which are owned and controlled by farmers. Its membership includes 122 regional marketing and farm supply cooperatives, the 37 banks of the cooperative Farm Credit System, and 31 state councils of farmer cooperatives.

NCFS represents about 90 percent of the more than 6700 local farmer cooperatives in the nation, with a combined membership of some two million farmers.

Guernsey cows produce high records

OXFORD — Two registered Guernsey cows in the herd of K.D. Linde-Lindenhof, Oxford, have recently completed top official DHIR actual production records, according to The American Guernsey Cattle Club.

All cows were milked two times a day. The testing was supervised by Penn State University, University Park.

Lindenhof D Fortune Gerda, a five year old, produced 18920 pounds of milk and 923 pounds of fat, in 365 days.

Lindenhof Fargos Erika, a five year old, produced 17730 pounds of milk and 887 pounds of fat, in 365 days.

In addition, Penn Del Fabian Blondie, a five year old, registered Guernsey cow, owned by Raymond & Louise Witmer-Penn-Del Farm, has completed an official DHIR actual production record of 18430 pounds of milk and 985 pounds of butterfat, in 305 days, two times a day milking, according to The American Guernsey Cattle Club.

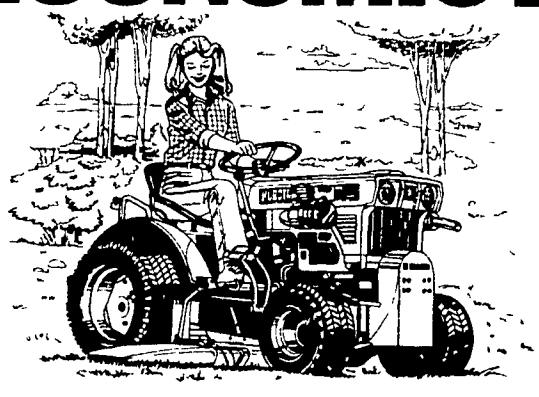
HOME ECONOMIST.



Kubota built the thrifty little B5100 Tractor with economy in mind. But they didn't economize on its features.

It has a sturdy 12 hp 2-cylinder diesel engine, standard rear PTO, 6 forward and 2 reverse speeds, hydraulic 3-point hitch, independent rear brakes, differential lock, and your choice of two- or four-wheel drive.

It can handle a mid- or rear-mount mower, rotary tiller, plow, disc harrow, and rear blade. Not to mention a tight budget.

Record number turn out for 4-H, FFA livestock judging

UNIVERSITY PARK — The largest turnout ever — including 274 members of 4-H and FFA clubs plus 50 college students — took part in the 8th Annual Spring Livestock Judging Contest held recently at Penn State.

Sponsored by the Penn State Block and Bridle Club, the event was directed by Brian Keister of Mifflinburg, senior in animal production. Assisting him were David Wise of Spring Grove, junior in animal production, and members of the 1980 Penn State livestock judging team.

Eight classes of animals were judged. This includes three classes of beef, two of sheep, and three classes of swine. Students placed the animals in regards to their conformation.

There were two collegiate divisions and two junior divisions. The collegiate divisions included one for more experienced students and one for the inexperienced students. The experienced students gave six sets of reasons, describing why they placed the animals as they did. The amateur class was just responsible for placing the animals

Brenda Werner of Hanover won the collegiate professional class. She was also high individual in oral reasons and swine judging.

Tim Beck of Seven Valleys won the beef cattle classes and Mary Streett of New London was the top sheep judge.

Carol Kinzer of Lancaster won the amateur collegiate division.

The junior division was open to 4-H and FFA students across the state. It was broken down into the beginner junior and the advanced junior divisions. The beginner junior class was only required to place the classes of animals, while the advanced juniors gave their sets of reasons – one each on beef cattle, sheep, and swine.

East Lancaster FFA Team B won the beginner junior division. Top individuals were, Robert Nelson of West Greene County FFA for beef cattle, Chad Cash of Centre County 4-H for sheep, and Beth McCullough of Mercer County 4-H for swine. The high individual judge was John Schuler of Butler County 4-H.

The advanced junior division was won by the 4-H team from Chester County Chuck Orr of the Mercer County 4-H team was the high scoring individual in the advanced junior division. Orr also placed first in judging sheep. Chris Knisley of York County 4-H was high individual in judging beef cattle, while Bonnie Wessner of Lehigh County 4-H was top swine judge.

THIS GRAIN FARMER FINDS YOU CAN LOSE 25% OF YOUR CROP WHEN YOU HEAT DRY SHELLED CORN

You lose two ways When the grain elevator charges 2½ percent per point of moisture to dry shelled corn, you pay 25 percent of your crop in drying costs if you take the moisture content down ten points. In addition, the corn you get back has shrunk in volume and feed value so you need to use more of the heat dried grain to fatten cattle and hogs and produce eggs.

That's why Harold Weaver, RD 2, Newville, Pennsylvania, started to use the on-the-farm natural-dry grain storage system from Advanced Ag Systems This system uses the drying effect and the wind chill factor of moving air forced up through the newly harvested grain in the bin.

"Before we got the natural-dry, air-cooled storage bin two years ago, we were always selling our shelled corn out of the field at harvest time," Weaver said "When you thought you took 100 bushels to the elevator, you would find you got paid for only about 60 bushels when the check came in the mail. Now we fill our 7500 bushel bin to the top, turn on the fans and let it dry out naturally. No costly fuel bills. No cracked, dusty, scorched grains Beautiful yellow kernels fit for any growing pig, fattening steer or laying hen And our full bin of shelled corn shrank down only three inches last year "

Several neighbors have also tried feeding shelled corn from Weaver's natural-dry grain storage bin with excellent results John Nolt had problems with a pen of hogs that continuously fought among themselves They never seemed to be satisfied even though they had enough to eat When Nolt switched from heat-dried corn from the feed mill to natural-dry corn from Weaver's on-the-farm storage bin, the hogs stopped fighting within three days "It had to be the corn," Nolt said. "That's the only thing we changed."

So if you find you also lose 25 percent of your crop when you take shelled corn from the field to the grain elevator, write for more information on how this natural-dry wind-chill factor system works Send your request to Advanced Ag Systems, RD 2, Box 174, Elverson, PA 19520 Or call (215) 286-9118

DHIA to accept bulk tank samples

LANCASTER — Effective May 1, 1981, the Pennsylvania DHIA will accept for component testing one bulk tank milk sample per herd.

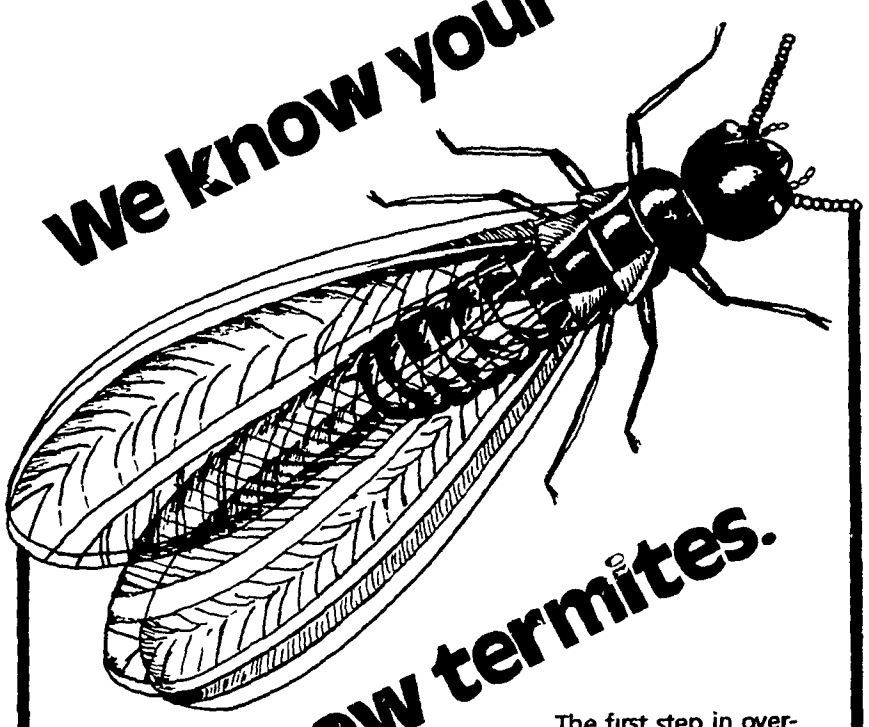
The sample must be in one of the regular plastic bags used for individual cow sampling and it must be packaged with the individual cow samples for that herd.

The sample bag containing the tank sample must be labeled tank. A self-addressed postal card or envelope for reporting the results of the test or tests must be included. The tank sample will be tested for the same components as the individual cow samples for the herd.

The charge will be $2 for milkfat and/or protein testing. There will be an additional charge of $2 for the somatic cell test.

These charges which are subject to review annually should be included as part of regular monthly testing fees and be collected by DHIA supervisor, which is in turn reported to the treasurers.

We know your enemy.



We know termites.

The first step in overcoming a problem is to fully understand that problem. Ehrlich understands the biology of termites. For instance, Ehrlich knows that termites need to replenish their moisture supply to survive. This gives us a key to combating them. Ehrlich is constantly updating their knowledge of termites and how to treat them. Plus we have over half a century of experience.

You should know that we know what we have to know to provide dependable termite control for your valuable home.

Termite control is too important to trust to anyone else

"When we needed a new car, Farmers First showed us how to drive a bargain." Before we even went car shopping, we talked with our Farmers First Loan Officer. He told us how much money would be available for the kind of car we wanted. He estimated our monthly payments and helped us decide how much we could afford to borrow.

Pre-arranging our loan made us "cash" buyers. Which gave us a much better chance to drive a bargain. And the benefits of dealing with Farmers First didn't end there. Because as we pay our loan, we're building important credit with the bank. Credit that can be very useful in the future. Farmers First even took the trouble to write the loan agreement in plain English.

We chose to have Farmers First deduct our payments automatically from our checking account. So we don't have to fuss with a payment book. And each month we get a complete statement that shows all of our accounts and loans. You need a car loan? It pays to choose your financing as carefully as you choose your car. Call the people at the People Bank...

...you don't have to be a Farmers First customer to ask about an auto loan.

Greener pastures

Most people welcome the opportunity to move on to "greener pastures"; so do cattle. To them, the lush green grass, the fresh air, the warm sunshine and the freedom to kick up their heels, is a welcome reprieve from the humdrum life of being penned up for the winter, from living on a ration of stored forages, and from the stress of hard concrete surfaces.

These spring pastures can serve as a tonic to cattle, helping to restore their systems back to normal. The young, lush growth is high in digestible energy, protein and minerals.

When cattle consume large amounts of high quality pasture in the young, vegetative state of growth, they may need only moderate levels of grain — perhaps as little as one pound of concentrate per five to six pounds of milk, and the protein content may be able to be reduced slightly.

As grasses approach the head stage of maturity and legumes, the early bud stage, quality declines; grain feeding and protein supplementation may have to be returned to near previous levels

Feeding excess grain to cattle on lush pastures can cause scouring and reduce fat tests, as a result of lowered fiber intakes. Supplemental feeding of some stored forages can help prevent these problems. Supplemental feeding also helps prevent weed poisoning. Weeds are generally the first things to start growing in spring and the last thing to be affected by summer droughts.

Fortunately, most of these toxic weeds are unpalatable, and cattle have the good sense to avoid them. But, when grass is short and if no other supplemental feeds are offered, cattle may be forced to turn to these weeds to satisfy their hunger. To help prevent bloat, let the dew burn off legumes and feed some stored forages before turning cows out to pasture.

Manage for production

Many pastures have the potential to be more productive. They can become much more than an exercise lot and a weed bed; they can become a valuable source of feed nutrients.

Liming, fertilizing, rotational grazing and periodic clipping is one of the easiest and surest ways I know of to bring a run-down pasture back to life. I would try this route before tearing up the old pasture and reseeding it; it's cheaper and the risks of seeding failure and soil erosion are less.

Most of these neglected pastures have sufficient amounts of good grass seed in the soil, just waiting for an opportunity to thrive.

Once the seed does germinate, the grass has to be given a chance to thrive. Here is where rotational grazing can help. Divide the pastures into several different paddocks Graze one for a few days and then rotate the herd to another. This gives grasses and legumes a chance to recover without being stressed by continual grazing and trampling pressures. It also helps prevent cows from grazing selectively.

When dividing a pasture into paddocks, consider accessibility to each paddock and cow's needs for shade and water.

Once cows have grazed a paddock and moved to another, the grazed paddock can be clipped. This helps to control weed growth and it helps keep the pasture young and vegetative. Young, vegetative grasses are more nutritious and more productive than mature grasses.

Once grass is allowed to mature and go to seed, it thinks its job is done for the season; clipping keeps the grass from maturing and fools it into making continued growth. The cutter bar of the mower will also help distribute cow "droppings." This should help to reduce parasite pressures; greater exposure to sunlight and the absence of cows should also help control parasites.

To sustain continued growth, pastures need to be limed and fertilized. A safe time to fertilize a pasture is after it has been grazed and the herd moved into another paddock; there is less danger of fertilizer toxicity to the herd.

If clipping alone does not control weeds, consider using a herbicide. Banvel in combination with 2,4-D will kill a wide variety of pasture weeds.

Spray when the weather is warm and moist, and when the weeds are growing actively — soon after a paddock has been grazed and a few weeks before the herd is scheduled to be returned to the paddock. Many pastures and exercise areas are starting to be over-run by a thorny, bushy type of red root pigweed. This spray program should control this weed if the weeds are sprayed at an early stage of growth.

A word of caution: it will also kill legumes.

Renovation

What if your pastures do not respond to these suggestions? Or, what if you do not have the right kind of pasture grasses and legumes for a productive, nutritious pasture? Then what?

If this is your situation, you haven't lost much, if anything, in trying the previous suggestions. You may need a complete pasture renovation, and the previous practices will help set the stage for a successful renovation; they will help you to build up a good base of fertility and will help you to control problem weeds before seeding time.

If complete renovation is needed, aim for a late summer seeding, providing soil moisture is sufficient for good germination. Seeding around September gives the new sod a chance to become established before the onset of hot, dry summer months, and many of the annual weeds which compete with the new seeding will be killed by frost. The next best time for seeding is very early in spring.

If pastures are divided into several paddocks, you have a better opportunity to renovate one paddock, while grazing the remainder paddocks.

The quality of many grass pastures can be improved by adding legumes. This can be accomplished by sod seeding (no-tilling) legumes into the established sod. If this is contemplated, concentrate on building up soil pH and phosphorus levels and controlling persistent broadleaf weed problems well before seeding time.

Restrict Grazing

To protect newly seeded pastures, restrict grazing for the first year, and especially when soils are wet.

Don't turn your pasture into an exercise lot. If pasture acreage is limited, consider fencing off a small area close to the barn for use as an exercise lot; chances are, it will support no sod growth.

Then, control the herd's grazing habits on the remaining limited acreage; let cows graze only if there is something there to graze - and perhaps only at night.

This will help you get maximum production from those few acres

We used to think of pastures as expensive sources of feed. This may still be the case. But, if we already have fenced off acreage, chances are we can get additional feed nutrients with little extra expense; it's worth considering in these days of rising costs of feed and energy.

If pastures can provide your herd with fresh air, a reprieve from concrete stress, some fresh forage for a few weeks; and if this results in better herd health, increased production and imporved overall performance, they suddenly become more profitable and deserve the best of management.

Pork Producers oppose PRV eradication

DES MOINES, IA — The National Pork Producers Council has gone on record in opposition to the proposed eradication program for pseudorabies; a virus which affects over eight percent of the hogs in the U.S.

Following a review of the research and information available to undergo the challenge of eradication, the NPPC board of directors determined that alternative methods of dealing with the problem deserved consideration.

"Until we have a test or vaccine that allows discrimination between the vaccinated animal and the naturally infected animal, and information on how the disease spreads, we cannot support an expensive eradication effort," said Carson Rogers, Chairman of NPPC's Swine Health Committee.

USDA estimates the cost of eradication at between $225 and $823 million over a 10-20 year period. "Our producers feel that nothing will be lost if we delay for a few years until the technology is available to effectively eradicate PRV. We will fully support eradication at that time," Rogers added.

The NPPC board also decided to request that USDA withdraw its federal pseudorabies regulations pertaining to the interstate movement of hogs after prior notice to states.

"Many states already have regulations which are stricter than the federal standards and those states probably would not be affected," according to David J. Meisinger, NPPC's Director of Research and Education. "However, those producers in states with heavy infection want the opportunity to vaccinate their hogs to protect against economic losses and still be able to move the hogs to another cooperating state."

The NPPC Board would also like to see federal assistance on pseudorabies channeled towards laboratory research on the virus and how it spreads. For the upcoming fiscal year, NPPC has devoted funds to three projects relating to PRV.

Brief answers to short questions

Sheila's Shorts

By Sheila Miller

Whadayacallit?

Words — the English language is full of them. But there are times when our dictionaries seem to be missing some important combinations of letters that can say exactly what we had in mind.

Modern English is sometimes diluted with slang and jargon from various sectors of society, and as time replaces the writers and linguists of previous generations, some of the words are lost — they become obsolete through misues or neglect.

As an agricultural writer, it's important to know the proper terminology of the profession. Knowing a duck from a drake, a goose from a gander, a ewe from a ram, and a mare from a stallion are expected of the on-farm writer. And, for me, the terminology is usually second nature.

Even as a child, I'd have to giggle when someone mistakenly referred to a bull as a "cow" And the bovine "facts of life" were learned at an early age as Dad explained the difference between a bull calf and a heifer calf and how quickly the bull calf could become a steer. Helping to care for our herd of commercial Hereford cattle gave me the lessons in farm-talk and identification that seem almost innate now.

Pigs are another story, however, since my parents stopped raising them when my sister and I were small. I was familiar with the proper use of the words boar and sow, but the words gilt and barrow only cropped up years later in my ag education. And, what do you call a bunch of pigs, besides herd? Is there another word?

Well, folks, that's the question I received from Space Farms Zoo and Museum, R6 Box 135, Beemerville Road, Sussex, N.J. 07461.

Quite frankly, I never heard of a group of swine being called anything but a herd. But, I decided to check with some experts.

I contacted the president of the Pennsylvania Swine Produ... Cooperative who unfortunately has no further enlightenment for me. Neither did Penn State's Animal Science Department.

Not giving up, I gave the question to the news editor of our sister publication, The Lititz Record. Her brother happens to be a crossword puzzle expert and creator.

After a quick telephone call to her sibling, she shared several new terms with me, gleaned from a trivia encyclopedia and a crossword puzzle dictionary.

How do you like the term "sounder"? This word is used in describing a herd of wild boars. Or, how about "drift"? That means a drove or herd, especially when talking about hogs. These two are new ones to me.

The only familiar word is "brood" used in talking about baby pigs, offspring still under the care of the mother.

So, take your pick — sounder, drift, brood, or herd. But remember, not everybody carries a pocket trivia encyclopedia or crossword dictionary when visiting a zoo. Language, it must be remembered, is conveying thoughts and ideas through words, hopefully for everyone's understanding.

Corn Silage Equation

For anyone interested in the mathematics of calculating the monetary value for a ton of corn silage, Penn State concocted a formula.

According to Harold Harpster, the formula is:

Multiply the price of No. 2 shell corn by the grain content of the silage (about 5½ to 6 bu/ton in this area). Add to that the cost of harvesting the silage, an extra $3.50 on the average.

To determine the grain content of the silage, divide the normal yield of corn grain (bushels per acre) by the tons of silage harvested on that acre.

Working through an example, Harpster suggested the price of No. 2 shelled corn to be $3.50 a bushel. If the grain equivalent of the silage was 6 bushels per ton, then the equation would figure out to $21 per ton. Added to that would be the cost of harvesting for a total of $24.50 per ton of silage.

HARRISBURG — Ten Pennsylvania farmers have been awarded leases on land and buildings at six state-owned farms, according to State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell.

Hallowell said that 2794 acres of land and buildings at the Allentown, Laurelton, Mayview, Selinsgrove, Wernersville and Woodville farms had been leased for a total of $166,671 per year, an average of $60 per acre.

Leases are for a period of three years with two-year renewal options.

He noted the Agriculture Department is still soliciting bids for leasing the Somerset Farm and 41 acres of apple and peach orchards at Selinsgrove The farms had been transferred to the Agriculture Department by Governor Thornburgh in an executive order on May 7, 1980.

In his executive order, the Governor noted, "The strength of Pennsylvania's agricultural economy rests on the development and success of its farm families." A priority of the Thornburgh administration has been helping the state's family farmers.

The key objective of the Agriculture Department has been to provide an efficient transition of farming operations to the private sector. Act 244 of 1980, signed by Governor Thornburgh on December 19 last year amended state law to allow leases of more than one year.

"This legislation was important in helping keep the farmlands at these farms viable for productive agricultural use," Hallowell said. "Three-year leases should enable these farmers to properly care for the lands and their farm operations by enabling long term planning.

"We are very pleased with the caliber of family farmers who bid on these farm leases," Hallowell continued. "They all recognize the importance of good conservation practices to preserve our farmland resources. And they have a desire to expand their own farm operations."

The Secretary noted the Department will work with these farmers, providing technical services and marketing assistance.

"I am confident that these farmers now have the opportunity to be a credit to themselves and the Commonwealth."

The Agriculture Secretary also noted that since their transfer from the Department of Public Welfare, the ten farms had operated in the black.

"These leases will also generate income for the state, which will permit us to help maintain these farms and buildings as viable farm operations."

The Agriculture Department will continue to administer the three state owned farms at Polk, Danville and Norristown until alternate uses are determined.

Mayview: 239 acres and buildings, Robert R. Morgan of Bridgeville.

Woodsville: 396 acres and buildings, 41 acres of fruit orchard, Joseph N. Kirby of Clinton.

Wernersville: 353 acres and buildings, Earl G. Martin of Ephrata.

Allentown: parcel, 1,455 acres and buildings, Glenn Williams of Walnutport; parcels 2 and 3, 219 acres and buildings, Howard Hummel of Cherryville; parcel 4, residence, Harry Williams of Northampton.

Laurelton. parcels 1 and 3, 346 acres, Mark I. Stern of Lock Haven; parcel 2, 185 acres, Leory S. Zimmerman of Millmont; parcel 3, six acres and hog production buildings, Steven L. Hook of Lewisburg.

Selinsgrove: parcels 1 and 3, 490 acres and buildings, Joseph Hilbish of Northumberland; parcel 2, 104.5 acres, Douglas Bowersox of Middleburg.

USDA boosts honey loan rates

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Loan and purchase rates for the 1981 crop of honey will average 57.4 cents per pound, 7.1 cents more than in 1980, a U.S Department of Agriculture official said last Thursday.

Edward Hews, acting administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said the 1981 level represents 60 percent of the April 1981 adjusted parity price of 95.6 cents per pounds.

Loans and purchases will be offered on 1981-crop honey stored in bulk and other eligible containers, on or off farms, he said. Producers have until March 31, 1982 to request loans that will mature June 30, 1982.

Hews said eligible producers wishing to sell honey to USDA's Commodity Credit Corporation should contact their ASCS county office before June 30, 1982. Producers must specify the approximate quantity they desire to sell.

The 1981-crop loan and purchase rates for extracted honey in 60-pound or large containers, by color and class, are as follows:

White or lighter 58.2
Extra light amber 57.2
Light amber 56.2
Other table and non-table honey 54.2

Honey delivered to CCC by beekeepers to satisfy loans will be used for domestic food donation programs.

The Milk Check

TOM JURCHAK
County Agent

More Surprises

When Secretary of Agriculture Block appeared before the Senate Agriculture Committee at the end of March and asked for legislation allowing him to determine the dairy price suport between 70 and 90 percent of parity, it was a big surprise to the general farm organizations as well as the dairy cooperatives.

They were expecting a support price between 75 and 90 percent with a bracketing arrangement that determined the exact level according to how much milk equivalent was purchased by the Commodity Credit Corporation as butter, powder or cheese.

Block went back to the White House and wrote the administration's new farm bill this month, he said ... "the Secretary is authorized to support the price of milk at less than 70 percent of parity if the Secretary determines that the Commodity Credit Corporation is accumulating, or has accumulated, excessive quantities of milk or milk products." He also said the support price set for the beginning of the new marketing year starting October 1, 1981 would not be less than the present support price of $12 80 set last October.

National Milk Producers Federaion calculates that, by October, $12.80 will be only 70 percent of parity. By October, 1982 it will be down to 60 percent — if they stick with it. However, NMPF says the administration proposal really gives the Secretary a choice between zero and 90 percent of parity after 1981 whenever he feels that CCC has accumulated "excessive" quantities of milk products.

Easter Recess

All of this happened before Congress adjourned for a two week Easter recess on April 9. It was introduced as Senate Bill 943 by Senator Helms and titled the Agricultural Act of 1981.

A companion bill is expected to be introduced in the House and the agriculture committees of both the House and the Senate will start working on the bill when they return on April 27.

We can only speculate on the reasons for this second surprise in the administration's demands on the dairy industry. It could be that they misinterpreted a lack of opposition to the removal of the April 1 adjustment as a willingness of dairy producers to settle for whatever the administration offered.

Or, it could be a grand stand play to show that the administration is really trying to help consumers cut food costs.

Or it could be — as we've said before — that reducing expenditures on the dairy price support program to levels projected by the administration three months ago will take deeper cuts than they expected.

However, if this is an effort by the administration to test the backbone of agriculture and the dairy industry, they may have gone too far. Almost as soon as the news hit the street, there was a reaction from farm groups, they would only try that much harder to get what they originally went after now that they knew more clearly what the administration really had in mind all the time.

Vaccinate horses now against encephalomyelitis

WILMINGTON, Del. — Mosquito breeding season is a good time to remind horse owners about vaccinating their horses against equine encephalomyelitis, says a University of Delaware extension equine specialist.

According to Dr. C. Melvin Reitnour, many needless deaths occur among horses because they were not vaccinated against this "sleeping sickness" disease, which is spread by biting insects, especially mosquitoes.

A three-component vaccine protects horses from three strains of the disease: eastern (EEE), western (WEE), and Venezuelan (VEE) equine encephalomyelitis, says Reitnour.

Sleeping sickness in horses is a virus disease whose symptoms are depression, high fever, incoordination, and a reeling gait. The horse may also experience loss of vision, drowsiness and an inability to swallow. Paralysis and death usually follow within two or three days.

Reitnour says the mortality rate for horses and ponies afflicted with the disease is approximately 90 percent. Those few animals which do survive often suffer permanent brain damage.

Horses should be given annual vaccinations to protect them, reminds the specialist. With the trivalent vaccine available, immunity can be provided against all three strains of the virus. The vaccine uses only killed viruses. This means fewer restrictions are needed than were previously when VEE could be protected against only by a modified live virus (MLV) vaccine.

The vaccine must be administered by deep intramuscular injection of two doses 21 to 28 days apart, both for initial vaccination and for annual revaccination.

Perry farmers install conservation

NEW BLOOMFIELD — More than 130 Perry County farms participated in the 1980 Agricultural Conservation Program, reported Howard Stambaugh, County Executive Director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

These cooperators established 277 acres of permanent vegetation and improved 246 acres. More than 300 acres of stripcropping systems were implemented.

Construction found 5 acres of cropland terraces being installed by earthmoving contractors, along with diversions which will protect 75 acres of cropland. Sod waterways installed will help to protect 310 acres from the effects of storm water and erosion.

An increasingly popular practice, animal waste management storage, financially helped to establish the needed facility on three Perry County farms.

A total of $58,252 of government dollars were spent in applying the needed ACP conservation work, with farmers matching approximately half the cost.

Along with the ACP funds, county farmers also received assistance through production adjustment programs, $188,812; commodity loans, $148,433; grain storage, $5,608; farm storage facilities, $27,495; and wood incentive program, $1324, for a total of $440,081.

Broiler placements up

HARRISBURG — Placements of broiler chicks in the commonwealth during the week ending April 4 were 2,345,000, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service

The placements were six percent above the corresponding week a year ago but four percent below the previous week

Placements in the 21 key poultry producing states were 85,753,000, one percent below the previous week but five percent above the same week a year earlier. Average placements in the 21 key states during the past nine weeks were three percent above a year ago.

Delaware team places third

NEWARK, Del — A team of four agronomy students from the University of Delaware's department of plant science squared off against some tough midwestern competition and came out third during a recent regional conference of the Student Activities Subdivision of the American Society of Agronomy at the University of Illinois Champaign-Urbana campus.

The Delaware contestants included juniors Mark Sultenfuss, who fielded crop-related questions; David Bartenfelder, on soils; and Al Krupski, on plant protection. Senior degree with distinction candidate Clare Evans handled the questions on practical application. Krupski had the highest score of any contestant in his category.

The team placed third after teams from Purdue University and the University of Wisconsin-Platville. It outranked contestants from Iowa State University, Kansas State University, the University of Nebraska, the University of Illinois, and a number of other large midwestern agricultural colleges.

The Delaware students are all members of the University of Delaware Agronomy Club, which was formed a year ago after attending another ASA sponsored student conference at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind. Purpose of the club is to give members an opportunity to further enhance their interest in agronomy, explore the career possibilities in this field, and broaden their knowledge of agronomy-related subjects.

UNIVERSITY PARK — The number of turkeys grown on Pennsylvania farms ranges from one to a million or more per season. That's a lot of white and dark meat. It takes about six months to grow a flock of finished market turkeys and 14 to 16 weeks to grow them to the turkey broiler age.

"With costs of production up, it pays producers to grow, finish, and market turkeys young," says Herbert C. Jordan, associate professor, poultry science, at Penn State.

Market Turkeys, a Penn State correspondence course, written by Jordan, explains types of turkeys that the markets want.

This 10-lesson course explains moving the turkey crop from producer to consumer; shipping, dressing, and packing turkeys; producing turkey hatching eggs, and fresh dressed and unfrozen carcasses. Other basic information covers habits of turkeys and turkey shelters, nutritional requirements and feeding turkeys, feeds and feeding management, and general management and health. Special attention is given to market development and business management.

The course is designed to give an overview of the commercial turkey industry. To order this course send $5.50, plus 75 cents handling, to Turkeys, Box 5000, University Park, PA 16802. Make check payable to Penn State.

140 students to compete in Little International

UNIVERSITY PARK — Some 140 students will compete in the 64th Little International Livestock Exposition to be held April 25 at Penn State. The show will begin sharply at 8 a.m. at the Penn State Beef-Sheep Center.

Admission to the show is free and the public is invited to attend the day's activities

Students compete in fitting and showing contests for plaques and trophies. Four species of animals — beef cattle, sheep, swine, and horses — will be exhibited

Fitting indicates how well the animal has been prepared for the show, in terms of cleanliness and clipping. Showmanship involves the student's ability to present the animal to the judge in the most eye-appealing manner.

The best fitters and showmen are selected and the top showmen in each species compete for the title of Grand Champion Showman.

This year's "Little I" is dedicated to Dave Hosterman, assistant herdsman at the Penn State swine barns. He is being honored for his many years of faithful service to the students who are interested in any aspect of swine production.

Thomas King, Director of the Extension Service at Penn State, has been named the outstanding alumnus for 1981 He is being honored for his distinguished service to the College of Agriculture and the Extension Service of Pennsylvania.

King is a 1951 graduate of Penn State and has been actively involved in Pennsylvania agriculture since the time of his graduation.

Superintendents help the students with their animals. This year's superintendents are Dale Rains of Mercer for beef; Linda Ebaugh of Delta for sheep; Lee Johnson of New Alexandria for swine; and Richard Denniston of Pittsburgh for horses.

Judges for the contest are Chester Hughes of Portage for beef cattle· Robert Zimmerman of New Concorde, Ohio for sheep; Keith Bard of Lewistown for swine; and Nancy Kohler of McKean for horses.

The show manager is Jeff Byerly of Milton, senior in animal production. Assisting him is Robert Bortz of Apollo, junior in animal production. Dr. Harold Harpster is the club's advisor.

The awards for the show have been sponsored by a variety of farms, breed associations, and businesses. Awards will be presented at the annual banquet to be held in the Hetzel Union Building following the show.

EGGS FOR ENTERTAINMENT

"Cide" means to kill

LITITZ — Each year thousands of blameless children are accidentally poisoned by ingesting hazardous substances because adults fail to practice poison prevention

In addition to over-the-counter drugs, household cleaning supplies, air fresheners, and many other items located in our homes including some plants, there is another substance typically found on all farms and most households that requires our utmost concern Pesticides

As spring-planting season approaches, it's a good idea to focus on safety preventions necessary when mixing, applying, storing, and disposing of pesticides. Before using a pesticide be familiar with first aid treatment associated with the chemical

Remember pesticides are chemicals used to kill pests. Don't let pesticides become humanicides! Always read the instructions on the label before opening a container

Wear personal protective equipment when handling presticides Now is the time to check equipment and make sure it's in good condition. Use rubber gloves, goggles and respirators for your protection Rubber boots, rubber suits, hats and other protective gear may be necessary when handling highly toxic materials Respirator filters should be replaced every eight hours, or if you smell pesticide odors while wearing the respirator. Wash the mask with soap and water each time a new filter is installed.

Rubber gloves should not have a cloth lining and should reach well beyond the wrists

Store pesticides in a separate room or building that can be locked. A sign on the door should warn of the contents Store paper pesticide containers off floors Keep liquid containers in a locked area until they can be disposed of properly

Take the following precautions to protect children

Keep children and pets well away from the areas where you mix, apply, or spray chemicals

Keep children, pets, and playthings where spray will not land on them

Do not let children or pets play on pesticide equipment or in storage area. Storage areas should be locked at all times.

Never put pesticides in empty pop bottle or other food containers Small children don't know the difference

Keep all pesticide containers away from children Remember, even empty ones may be poisonous

In the event of a poisoning accident, call your doctor. Also be sure to take the poison container with you to the doctor

Poisonings are tragic. Poisoning accidents can be prevented if we observe the necessary and yet often common sense precautions involved in poison prevention Take time this week to poison-proof your home and farm to make them safer places for us and especially our children

WHAT IS GOLDEN BULKY?

Purina Golden Bulky has long been a favorite of profit-minded dairymen because this bulky, nutritious feed can be used so many different ways to help increase milk production and add income to dairy operations throughout America.

Golden Bulky was first fed to cows and heifers in the early 1900's. Since its introduction, Purina Dairy scientists have made many improvements which have added to its versatility and milk-making qualities.

It is a bulky, nutritious, easy-to feed 10% protein ration containing molasses. Cows really love its sweet, succulent flavor! It is a versatile ration, which fits well into feeding programs for milk cows, heifers or dry cows. With its fortification of minerals and Vitamins A and D it makes an excellent supplement in roughage programs with hay, pastures or corn silage.

Because of its versatile qualities it has often been called "A dairyman's best friend."
